Mayor William D. Radcliff went to Columbus Wednesday to confer with the engineers.

The program has been roughly estimated as $30,000 for a storm sewer system, $50,000 for a sanitary system, and $58,000 for a water plant. The village plans to issue $20,000 worth of mortgage revenue bonds for the waterworks, and $20,000 worth of municipal bonds for the sewer systems.

A special election will be called for a vote on the bond issue.

TORONTO, Ont., April 14 — (UP)—Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn has requested the resignations of David A. Croll, Ontario minister of labor, and Attorney General Arthur W. Roebuck, it was announced today.

Croll and Roebuck opposed Hepburn's fight "against the forces of John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chairman, and communism which are marching hand in hand."

Pastoral Relationship of Rev. E. S. Toensmeier and Circleville Church Dissolved at Meeting

The Columbus Presbytery, meeting in Westerville Tuesday, dissolved the pastoral relationship between Rev. Emil S. Toensmeier and the Circleville Presbyterian church.

George F. Grand—Girard and J. O. Eagleson represented the local congregation at the meeting.

In response to the motion granting the request, many of the men of the Presbytery spoke highly of both the Rev. and Mrs. Toensmeier and expressed regret at their leaving.

The Rev. Mr. Toensmeier has stood high in the counsels of the Presbytery and has contributed freely of his service to the institution. Both local men paid high tribute to Mr. Toensmeier's accomplishments and standing in the community and church. They gave recognition to Mrs. Toensmeier in her splendid leadership and service in church activities.

The resignation becomes effective June 1.

The Rev. Mr. Toensmeier was among the commissioners nominated to represent the Presbytery at the meeting of the general assembly to be held in Columbus the latter part of May, but withdrew his name.

FARM INCOMES TO REMAIN HIGH

Good Prices to Prevail, Government Experts Declare

WASHINGTON, April 14. — (UP)—Sustained farm prosperity during the next few months was forecast today by the department of agriculture in its April review of the agricultural situation.

Farm income is now running more than $100,000,000 a month ahead of last year despite decreased volume of marketing, the department said. Prices are 10 to 30 percent above a year ago.

Government benefit payments to farmers through the AAA have added approximately $50,000,000 a month to farm income, whereas a year ago, just after the supreme court's AAA decision, virtually no payments were being made.

Farm income, including government payments, totaled $681,000,000 in January and $557,000,000 in February of this year. Last year the total was $551,000,000 in January and $449,000,000 in February.

Relatively high prices, compared with a year ago, probably will be continued, at least until the crops are harvested, the department said. The supplies of agricultural products on farms on April 1 of this year generally were the lowest in several years, however.

During the last year most farm products have equalled or exceeded "parity"—the amount which a unit of a farm product would purchase in manufactured goods compared with the 1909-1913 period.

Bethlehem Steel touched 94½ up 1⅞. Republic Steel rose nearly a point on news the company is operating at 90 per cent of capacity.

UNION MAN HITS SHERIFF, JUDGES AND POLITICIANS

WASHINGTON, April 14 — (UP) — Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers of America, charged before the La Follette civil liberties committee today that coal operators, "the sheriff, several judges and political machines" banded together to keep the mine union out of Harlan county, Kentucky.

Murray, stocky, partially-bald veteran union leader whose testimony was given with a heavy Scotch brogue, told the committee that the union had been seeking to organize Harlan county miners for 15 years.

"All our efforts," he added, "have been resisted by the Harlan county Coal Operators's association, the sheriff, several judges, and the mechanisms of the political machines they have set up from time to time."

Murray was called as the first of a series of witnesses summoned by the committee to present the story of capital-labor strife in the Kentucky county battleground.

SUPREME COURT DECISION ENDS INDUSTRIAL WAR

Labor Front is Quiet as Secretary Perkins Calls Leaders

FORD RETURNS NORTH

Michigan Man Says Company Has Always Been Fair

BY UNITED PRESS

Leaders of industry today studied the Wagner Labor act, validation of which by the supreme court firmly established collective bargaining as the law of the land. Several industrialists prepared the invitation of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins to confer with union and government leaders on collective bargaining methods.

The labor front appeared calmer than at any time since the beginning of the year. Few strikes — none of them on a large scale — harassed industry.

At Chicago Heights, Ill., steel strikers affiliated with John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, said they would return to work in Calumet Steel company plants as soon as the company signs an agreement drawn up last week.

Ford Returns Home

Henry Ford returned to Dearborn, Mich., stating the court decision "can have no effect on us" and declaring that the Ford company "has always been fair."

At Kent, Wash., vigilantes drove 10 farm hands, who had been conducting a sit-down strike, from Kent Farms company property.

The General Motors strike at Oshawa, Ontario, today reflected itself in the Ontario political situation as Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn requested resignations of his minister of labor and attorney general. He demanded solid cabinet support in his attitude towards the strike, led by Lewis' C. I. O.

Women pickets replaced men as 200 non-union workers entered the plants.

THREE OUTLAWS GET $25,000 IN MICHIGAN BANK

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 14—(UP)—The Hall street branch of the National bank of Grand Rapids was held up today by three bandits, armed with sawed-off shotguns, who escaped with an estimated $25,000.

The hold-up occurred shortly before 10:30 a. m., police said.

Three bandits entered the bank and warned Don Swarthout, manager, and Edmund Johnson, teller, that "it was a hold-up".

There were two customers in the bank at the time. Their names were not learned immediately. There was not shooting and the bandits worked with efficiency while they looted the vault and tellers' cages.

They left the bank shortly after they had appeared, and escaped in an automobile which had been waiting at the curb. A fourth bandit was at the wheel of the car.

The robbers fled north on Division avenue. The robbery occurred within one block of the south end police precinct station. Police, sheriff, and state police organized a pursuit.

VOTE TO RAISE MANY MILLIONS PUT ON SLATE

Senate Must Act on New Relief Measure or Kitchens Loom

GOV. DAVEY MAY ACT

Question of New Levies Evaded in Caucus

COLUMBUS, April 14 — (UP) — Gov. Davey's plan to set up soup kitchens after tomorrow to feed the state's 350,000 needy became a distinct possibility today as the senate met to vote on the $7,000,000 Nichols relief bill with leaders convinced the measure will not pass.

At the same time, the house was to vote today on the Huml individual income tax bill, estimated to raise $15,000,000 annually, after failing to reach the measure yesterday. Proponents predicted a "top-heavy" vote in favor of the bill.

Test Vote Recorded

A test vote taken on the Nichols bill in the second of two senate joint caucuses yesterday revealed only 18 senators in favor of the bill and 15 opposed, Majority Floor Leader Keith Lawrence, Cuyahoga, told newspapermen. Twenty-four votes are required to pass the bill as an emergency — making it effective immediately, and 19 favorable votes are required to pass the measure even without the emergency clause.

Sen. Lawrence frankly admitted he did not know what steps could be taken to avert the relief crisis should the Nichols bill be defeated. He said he believed passage of any relief bill by Thursday was "highly doubtful."

The floor leader also said Gov. Davey indicated recently that should the Nichols bill pass both houses, he would veto it on the grounds it appropriates $7,000,000 for the remainder of this year from an "empty" general revenue fund.

Sen. Harold D. Nichols, D., Clermont, one of the authors of the relief bill, told the caucus the $7,-

JUDGE CHARGES AKRON, O., PAPER WITH CONTEMPT

AKRON, April 14—(UP)—A contempt of court citation against Walter Morrow, editor of the Akron Times-Press, was ordered drawn up today by Common Pleas Judge Walter Wanamaker.

The citation resulted from violation of Judge Wanamaker's injunction against publication of proceedings and personnel of the April grand jury. The Times-Press published a partial list of grand jurors.

Judge Wanamaker termed his action an experiment but "in the spirit of the law."

It was the first time in Summit county history a judge banned publication of names of regularly impaneled grand jurors and of witnesses subpenaed for testimony. The judge's charge to the grand jury also was made in secret.

Judge Wanamaker said Morrow's only recourse was habeas corpus action in the court of appeals.

"My action should not be confused with a matter of mere cooperation in protecting witnesses who might be victims of violence," Morrow said. "I always have been willing to cooperate with the prosecutor in such cases. The judge's order is only incidentally concerned with such cases. It is so broad and deep as to constitute a flat challenger to the newspapers to fight for freedom of the press."

More Power Now

U. S. SUPREME court decision decreeing the Wagner national labor relations act constitutional gives the three-man national labor relations board, headed by J. Warren Madden of Pittsburgh, above, new wide powers. Madden, whose term runs for five years, is a former professor at the University of Pittsburgh law school.

INTERURBAN CAR LEAVES TRACKS, INJURING FOUR

CLEVELAND, O., April 14 — (UP)—Four persons were injured and about 30 were shaken up today when a Lake Shore Electric interurban car jumped the tracks and struck a steel trolley pole in suburban Lakewood.

Officials said the pole kept the 40-ton steel car from upsetting. It rested at a 30-degree angle against the pole.

Automobile and street car traffic was tied up 30 minutes by the accident.

The injured were taken to Lakewood city hospital.

They are: Miss Mary Tumas, 20, Lorain, bruises and shock; Charles Kafer, 62, Lorain, abraisons on arms and knees; Joseph Maslyk, Lorain, cuts and bruises, and Edwin Russell, 34, Avon Lake, possible fracture of right ankle.

Hospital attendants said several other passengers were brought there by motorists but did not require medical attention.

LOYALIST FORCE CLAIMS VICTORY OVER WIDE AREA

MADRID, April 14.—(UP)—The loyalist forces claimed a new victory against rebels on the Guadalajara front northeast of Madrid today. Military dispatches from the Brihuega sector reported they had pushed the insurgents back 10 miles.

The loyalists reported they had pressed on to the right of the Aragon highway on the Brigueha sector.

To the northwest of Madrid, they claimed to have advanced nearly five miles toward Navas Del Marques in the Sierra Guadarrama. One dispatch said the loyalists had occupied the railway station of the town.

RIFFLE DEMANDS $3,500 DAMAGES AFTER COLLISION

Harry W. Riffle, Route 4, county dog warden, filed suit for $3,500 in common pleas court Wednesday against R. P. Wilkins, Urbana, O., as the result of an auto-truck collision on Route 56, three miles west of Circleville last Jan. 13.

Mr. Riffle says he was riding in his auto on the highway when a truck, driven by Ross Brown, an employe of Mr. Wilkins, crashed into the rear of his car, knocking it off the highway into an adjoining field. Mr. Riffle says he received injuries to his right side and hip.

The plaintiff asks $3,000 for personal injuries and $500 for his auto.

LARGER DEFICIT FEARED UNLESS EXPENSES FALL

Heads of Departments Told to Retrench With End of Fiscal Year at Hand

A. A. A. TO 'FURLOUGH'

Two and Half Billion Debt Mark Approached

WASHINGTON, April 14—(UP)—President Roosevelt's attempt to avoid a greater deficit than anticipated today spurred an intensive government economy drive in the two and one half months remaining in the present fiscal year.

Heads of government bureaus, directed by Mr. Roosevelt to report by May 1 on steps taken to reduce spending and the amount of estimated savings, prepared to retrench more drastically than at any time since the New Deal's accession to power.

Announcement of the president's economy drive was followed by a statement from the Agricultural Adjustment administration that approximately 850 employes will be "furloughed" May 1. Lay-offs were anticipated in other governmental departments and agencies.

Similar to Year Ago

In demanding a curtailment of spending, the president followed the same procedure as last May. But on that occasion he sought to prevent bureaus from engaging in a last month splurge with their unexpended balances. This year, the president acted earlier because of the positive indications that revenues for the fiscal year would be "materially less" than the $5,828,150,719 originally anticipated.

So far this fiscal year, which ends June 30, the government's income has been $3,898,951,369. Indications are that the deficit in receipts will be between $300,000,000 and $500,000,000. The budget estimated expenditures would aggregate $8,480,804,493. Up to April 10, $5,799,992,736—approximately $1,800,000,000 more than receipts—had been expended.

Statisticians estimated that the $2,680,000,000 expenditures slated for the remainder of the fiscal year would have to be trimmed to approximately $2,180,000,000 to avoid a greater deficit than the $2,652,653,774 figure given in the budget.

Revenues Shrink

"It is apparent at this time," the president said in his economy order, "that the revenues of the government for the present fiscal year will be materially less than the amount estimated in my budget message of last January; and, hence, the deficit will be far greater than was anticipated unless there is an immediate curtailment of expenditures."

A study of latest available treasury figures showed that if most departments and bureaus continue spending at their present

The hold-up occurred shortly before 10:30 a. m., police said.

Three bandits entered the bank and warned Don Swarthout, manager, and Edmund Johnson, teller, that "it was a hold-up".

There were two customers in the bank at the time. Their names were not learned immediately. There was not shooting and the bandits worked with efficiency while they looted the vault and tellers' cages.

They left the bank shortly after they had appeared, and escaped in an automobile which had been waiting at the curb. A fourth bandit was at the wheel of the car.

The robbers fled north on Division avenue. The robbery occurred within one block of the south end police precinct station. Police, sheriff, and state police organized a pursuit.

One hundred and sixty-two suits asking $1,772,300 have been settled for $96,640.

One firm of attorneys was found to be handling 78 cases, another 40, a third 27, a fourth 23, and another 14.

VOTE TO RAISE MANY MILLIONS PUT ON SLATE

Senate Must Act on New Relief Measure or Kitchens Loom

GOV. DAVEY MAY ACT

Question of New Levies Evaded in Caucus

COLUMBUS, April 14 — (UP) — Gov. Davey's plan to set up soup kitchens after tomorrow to feed the state's 350,000 needy became a distinct possibility today as the senate met to vote on the $7,000,000 Nichols relief bill with leaders convinced the measure will not pass.

At the same time, the house was to vote today on the Huml individual income tax bill, estimated to raise $15,000,000 annually, after failing to reach the measure yesterday. Proponents predicted a "top-heavy" vote in favor of the bill.

Test Vote Recorded

A test vote taken on the Nichols bill in the second of two senate joint caucuses yesterday revealed only 18 senators in favor of the bill and 15 opposed, Majority Floor Leader Keith Lawrence, Cuyahoga, told newspapermen. Twenty-four votes are required to pass the bill as an emergency — making it effective immediately, and 19 favorable votes are required to pass the measure even without the emergency clause.

Sen. Lawrence frankly admitted he did not know what steps could be taken to avert the relief crisis should the Nichols bill be defeated. He said he believed passage of any relief bill by Thursday was "highly doubtful."

The floor leader also said Gov. Davey indicated recently that should the Nichols bill pass both houses, he would veto it on the grounds it appropriates $7,000,000 for the remainder of this year from an "empty" general revenue fund.

Sen. Harold D. Nichols, D., Clermont, one of the authors of the relief bill, told the caucus the $7,-

JUDGE CHARGES AKRON, O., PAPER WITH CONTEMPT

AKRON, April 14—(UP)—A contempt of court citation against Walter Morrow, editor of the Akron Times-Press, was ordered drawn up today by Common Pleas Judge Walter Wanamaker.

The citation resulted from violation of Judge Wanamaker's injunction against publication of proceedings and personnel of the April grand jury. The Times-Press published a partial list of grand jurors.

Judge Wanamaker termed his action an experiment but "in the spirit of the law."

It was the first time in Summit county history a judge banned publication of names of regularly impaneled grand jurors and of witnesses subpenaed for testimony. The judge's charge to the grand jury also was made in secret.

Judge Wanamaker said Morrow's only recourse was habeas corpus action in the court of appeals.

"My action should not be confused with a matter of mere cooperation in protecting witnesses who might be victims of violence," Morrow said. "I always have been willing to cooperate with the prosecutor in such cases. The judge's order is only incidentally concerned with such cases. It is so broad and deep as to constitute a flat challenger to the newspapers to fight for freedom of the press."

INTERURBAN CAR LEAVES TRACKS, INJURING FOUR

CLEVELAND, O., April 14 — (UP)—Four persons were injured and about 30 were shaken up today when a Lake Shore Electric interurban car jumped the tracks and struck a steel trolley pole in suburban Lakewood.

Officials said the pole kept the 40-ton steel car from upsetting. It rested at a 30-degree angle against the pole.

Automobile and street car traffic was tied up 30 minutes by the accident.

The injured were taken to Lakewood city hospital.

They are: Miss Mary Tumas, 20, Lorain, bruises and shock; Charles Kafer, 62, Lorain, abraisons on arms and knees; Joseph Maslyk, Lorain, cuts and bruises, and Edwin Russell, 34, Avon Lake, possible fracture of right ankle.

Hospital attendants said several other passengers were brought there by motorists but did not require medical attention.

LOYALIST FORCE CLAIMS VICTORY OVER WIDE AREA

MADRID, April 14.—(UP)—The loyalist forces claimed a new victory against rebels on the Guadalajara front northeast of Madrid today. Military dispatches from the Brihuega sector reported they had pushed the insurgents back 10 miles.

The loyalists reported they had pressed on to the right of the Aragon highway on the Brigueha sector.

To the northwest of Madrid, they claimed to have advanced nearly five miles toward Navas Del Marques in the Sierra Guadarrama. One dispatch said the loyalists had occupied the railway station of the town.

RIFFLE DEMANDS $3,500 DAMAGES AFTER COLLISION

Harry W. Riffle, Route 4, county dog warden, filed suit for $3,500 in common pleas court Wednesday against R. P. Wilkins, Urbana, O., as the result of an auto-truck collision on Route 56, three miles west of Circleville last Jan. 13.

Mr. Riffle says he was riding in his auto on the highway when a truck, driven by Ross Brown, an employe of Mr. Wilkins, crashed into the rear of his car, knocking it off the highway into an adjoining field. Mr. Riffle says he received injuries to his right side and hip.

The plaintiff asks $3,000 for personal injuries and $500 for his auto.

LARGER DEFICIT FEARED UNLESS EXPENSES FALL

Heads of Departments Told to Retrench With End of Fiscal Year at Hand

A. A. A. TO 'FURLOUGH'

Two and Half Billion Debt Mark Approached

WASHINGTON, April 14—(UP) —President Roosevelt's attempt to avoid a greater deficit than anticipated today spurred an intensive government economy drive in the two and one half months remaining in the present fiscal year.

Heads of government bureaus, directed by Mr. Roosevelt to report by May 1 on steps taken to reduce spending and the amount of estimated savings, prepared to retrench more drastically than at any time since the New Deal's accession to power.

Announcement of the president's economy drive was followed by a statement from the Agricultural Adjustment administration that approximately 850 employes will be "furloughed" May 1. Lay-offs were anticipated in other governmental departments and agencies.

Similar to Year Ago

In demanding a curtailment of spending, the president followed the same procedure as last May. But on that occasion he sought to prevent bureaus from engaging in a last month splurge with their unexpended balances. This year, the president acted earlier because of the positive indications that revenues for the fiscal year would be "materially less" than the $5,828,150,719 originally anticipated.

So far this fiscal year, which ends June 30, the government's income has been $3,898,951,369. Indications are that the deficit in receipts will be between $300,000,000 and $500,000,000. The budget estimated expenditures would aggregate $8,480,804,493. Up to April 10, $5,799,992,736—approximately $1,800,000,000 more than receipts—had been expended.

Statisticians estimated that the $2,680,000,000 expenditures slated for the remainder of the fiscal year would have to be trimmed to approximately $2,180,000,000 to avoid a greater deficit than the $2,652,653,774 figure given in the budget.

Revenues Shrink

"It is apparent at this time," the president said in his economy order, "that the revenues of the government for the present fiscal year will be materially less than the amount estimated in my budget message of last January; and, hence, the deficit will be far greater than was anticipated unless there is an immediate curtailment of expenditures."

A study of latest available treasury figures showed that if most departments and bureaus continue spending at their present

FORAGE CROPS, PLOWING AIDED BY SOAKING RAIN

A steady rain, pleasing to farmers, descended on Pickaway county Wednesday.

F. K. Blair, county agent, said the rain would boost grasses and clover. It is needed for forage crops, despite the amount of precipitation earlier in the year.

Some farmers contended the ground has been too dry for good plowing.

SPANGLER TO AID SHERIFF DURING DEPUTY'S ILLNESS

Marshall Spangler, Watt street, was appointed a special deputy Wednesday by Sheriff Charles Radcliff to assist during the absence of R. E. Armstrong.

Armstrong underwent an operation last week in Cleveland Clinic hospital for a nerve trouble in his jaw. He was expected home Wednesday, but it will be about a month before he will be able to resume his duties.

COUNTY DEMOCRATS HEAR SPEECHES AND ARRANGE MONTHLY MEETINGS

JOHN C. YOUNG TALKS OF WORK DONE BY F. D. R.

Three Candidates For City Office Introduced During Tuesday Gathering

PARTY CHAIRMAN PRESENT

Social Event During Summer Planned by Organization

Pickaway county Democrats, 100 strong, met in the common pleas court room Tuesday night for a brief pep and business meeting. They laid plans for a series of meetings to be held the second Tuesday of each month.

oJhn C Young, of the state department of liquor control, a former chautauqua man, spoke at the meeting, praising the local club for its active part in the last campaign, and lauding President Roosevelt for his accomplishments for the common people.

"When the American people start out to accomplish a certain thing, they do it," Mr. Young said. "They abolished slavery. We have today a slavery that is just as bad, and Roosevelt is determined to block out industrial slavery. Other presidents have locked horns with the supreme court.

Different Than 1933

"We are living in a machine age that greatly reduced employment. With the advancement of the machine the average politician has remained a Rip Van Winkle. This is not true of Roosevelt. He has helped the common people and when a man tells you it is not different now than four years ago you know he's lying.

"Hoover said prosperity was just around the corner, but we were locked in a roundhouse. Roosevelt in a fireside talk said he was just getting ready to scrap, and don't think he didn't mean what he said. The people of today are using their heads for more than a hat-rack, at least in 46 of the states."

The speaker cited the vast improvements in agriculture accomplished through the A. A. A., and the benefits given the young men in C. C. C. camps.

Three candidates for city offices at the primaries were introduced. They were William B. Cady and Boyd Horn, candidates for mayor, and Harry Bartholomew, candidate for city treasurer.

Goeller Present

Lawrence Goeller, chairman of the executive committee, spoke briefly, informing club members the committee would make no indorsements for the primaries, but indorsements would be made for the election.

He announced he had received requests for several persons for clerical positions in the Atlanta Resettlement project, and from all indications the project would provide employment to many men of various trades.

Clark Hunsicker, representative in the general assembly, urged Democrats to keep an active organization, holding regular meetings. A suggestion was made that regular monthly meetings be held, and it was approved by members. Arrangements are being considered for a social event of some type this summer, probably a county picnic. Plans are being considered also for the organization of a young people's club.

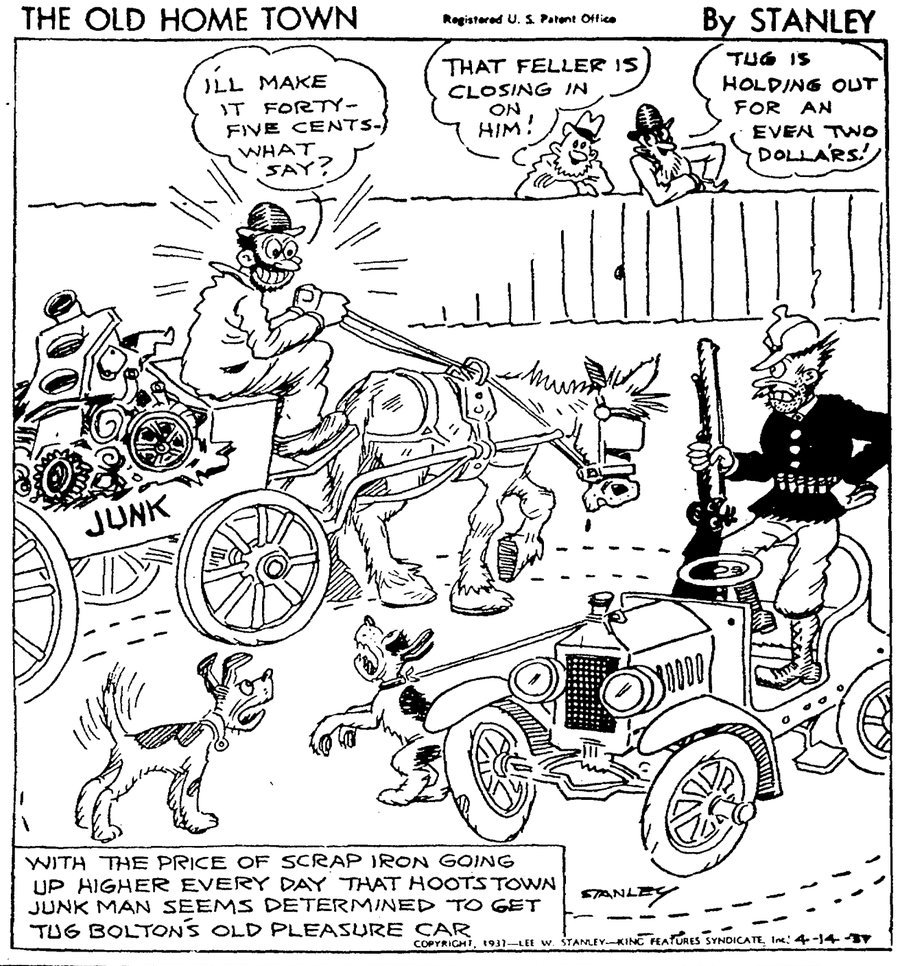

A financial report of the club showed a balance of $50.86 in the treasury. Receipts of the club amounted to $434.55 including 398 paid memberships. Disbursements amounted to $383.69. The club took an active part in the last campaign and spent considerable for conducting the party headquarters.

The $5 door prize was awarded Mrs. Bess Henderson, W. Ohio street. Her name was the fifth drawn. E. W. Weiler, president of the club, was chairman of the meeting.

PAROCHIAL BILL DEFEAT CERTAIN IN OHIO HOUSE

Representatives Send Aid Measure to Education Committee

FINAL VOTE IS 65 - 60

Two Other School Laws May Go Same Path

COLUMBUS, April 14 — (UP) —Defeat of all "parochial" school legislation this session was regarded as certain today after the house, by a vote of 65 to 60, sent the senate-approved $7,000,000 Waldvogel bill to what many considered its "graveyard" in the education committee.

Proponents and opponents of the legislation alike admitted the legislation undoubtedly would die in the committee, composed chiefly of rural members. One member of the committee told the United Press he conducted a private poll of the body and found that of the 21 members, 14 were "definitely" opposed, five "uncertain," and only two definitely "for".

Payment Provided

The Waldvogel bill, which, in effect, provides for the payment of 10 cents a day for each grade school pupil and 15 cents a day for each high school student in schools outside the regular public school system, was brought out by the house reference committee yesterday with the recommendation it be sent to the finance committee.

Rep. Donald D. Canfield, R., Wood, moved to send the bill to the education committee. Rep. George Grusenmeyer, D., Montgomery, moved to table Canfield's motion but Grusenmeyer's motion was defeated and the bill was referred to the school body.

Friends of the bill felt it had an even chance of receiving favorable action by the finance committee.

Opponents of "parochial" legislation said the same strategy would be resorted to "if necessary" when two other school-aid bills, passed by the senate yesterday, reach the house.

These were the Kan-Gallagher bill, passed 24 to 8, providing free textbooks of "non-sectarian" nature to students in private and parochial schools as well as public schools, and the McIntyre bill, approved 21-9, providing free transportation to parochial and private school pupils in districts where public school students are transported without cost.

Estimates Not Available

State department of education officials said no estimate could be made of the amount these bills, if approved, would cost the state, but pointed out that students in barber colleges, schools of cosmotology and many other privately-operated institutions would be eligible to benefits under the bills' provisions.

Many house members, who regard any such legislation as political "hot potatoes," privately expressed relief that the bills were taken off their hands.

At the same time the house, by a viva voce vote, recommitted to the education committee, a bill introduced by Rep. R. J. Kiefer, R., Logan, authorizing boards of education to purchase liability and property damage or accident insurance covering school buses and pupils transported in the buses. The bill is not of a parochial nature.

Absent from the air for more than eight months, Lily Pons is coming back.

The great French singer returns to the air, with Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra, on April 14 at 9 p. m., for the premiere of a new weekly program.

The association of Miss Pons and Kostelanetz is one of long standing, and for a year or more rumors have had them married, about to be married, or at the very least, engaged. During Miss Pons' absence from the air one of her activities was the making of a motion picture, "That Girl From Paris" and for thirteen week-ends Kostelanetz flew to Hollywood to conduct the music for the picture, flying back again just as regularly for the two programs weekly he was conducting in the East.

In Hollywood, Kostelanetz appeared as guest conductor with the Los Angeles Symphony orchestra with Miss Pons as guest soloist. The concert broke all attendance records for the Hollywood Bowl.

One of the songs from "That Girl From Paris" will be sung by Miss Pons for her premiere. The song is "Seal It With a Kiss," remarkable for the fact that several records were established with it.

The song was written in New York by Arthur Schwartz. It was finished on one Friday morning and played for Kostelanetz, who liked it. A telephone call was put through to the Coast, and an arranger heard the melody played in New York. Kostelanetz outlined his ideas about the arrangement. The same night, Kostelanetz flew to Hollywood. On arrival Saturday afternoon he found the arrangement complete, rehearsed it and had it on the sound track in less than two hours' time.

Pickaway county Democrats, 100 strong, met in the common pleas court room Tuesday night for a brief pep and business meeting. They laid plans for a series of meetings to be held the second Tuesday of each month.

oJhn C Young, of the state department of liquor control, a former chautauqua man, spoke at the meeting, praising the local club for its active part in the last campaign, and lauding President Roosevelt for his accomplishments for the common people.

"When the American people start out to accomplish a certain thing, they do it," Mr. Young said. "They abolished slavery. We have today a slavery that is just as bad, and Roosevelt is determined to block out industrial slavery. Other presidents have locked horns with the supreme court.

Different Than 1933

"We are living in a machine age that greatly reduced employment. With the advancement of the machine the average politician has remained a Rip Van Winkle. This is not true of Roosevelt. He has helped the common people and when a man tells you it is not different now than four years ago you know he's lying.

"Hoover said prosperity was just around the corner, but we were locked in a roundhouse. Roosevelt in a fireside talk said he was just getting ready to scrap, and don't think he didn't mean what he said. The people of today are using their heads for more than a hat-rack, at least in 46 of the states."

The speaker cited the vast improvements in agriculture accomplished through the A. A. A., and the benefits given the young men in C. C. C. camps.

Three candidates for city offices at the primaries were introduced. They were William B. Cady and Boyd Horn, candidates for mayor, and Harry Bartholomew, candidate for city treasurer.

Goeller Present

Lawrence Goeller, chairman of the executive committee, spoke briefly, informing club members the committee would make no indorsements for the primaries, but indorsements would be made for the election.

He announced he had received requests for several persons for clerical positions in the Atlanta Resettlement project, and from all indications the project would provide employment to many men of various trades.

Clark Hunsicker, representative in the general assembly, urged Democrats to keep an active organization, holding regular meetings. A suggestion was made that regular monthly meetings be held, and it was approved by members. Arrangements are being considered for a social event of some type this summer, probably a county picnic. Plans are being considered also for the organization of a young people's club.

A financial report of the club showed a balance of $50.86 in the treasury. Receipts of the club amounted to $434.55 including 398 paid memberships. Disbursements amounted to $383.69. The club took an active part in the last campaign and spent considerable for conducting the party headquarters.

The $5 door prize was awarded Mrs. Bess Henderson, W. Ohio street. Her name was the fifth drawn. E. W. Weiler, president of the club, was chairman of the meeting.

PAROCHIAL BILL DEFEAT CERTAIN IN OHIO HOUSE

Representatives Send Aid Measure to Education Committee

FINAL VOTE IS 65 - 60

Two Other School Laws May Go Same Path

COLUMBUS, April 14 — (UP) —Defeat of all "parochial" school legislation this session was regarded as certain today after the house, by a vote of 65 to 60, sent the senate-approved $7,000,000 Waldvogel bill to what many considered its "graveyard" in the education committee.

Proponents and opponents of the legislation alike admitted the legislation undoubtedly would die in the committee, composed chiefly of rural members. One member of the committee told the United Press he conducted a private poll of the body and found that of the 21 members, 14 were "definitely" opposed, five "uncertain," and only two definitely "for".

Payment Provided

The Waldvogel bill, which, in effect, provides for the payment of 10 cents a day for each grade school pupil and 15 cents a day for each high school student in schools outside the regular public school system, was brought out by the house reference committee yesterday with the recommendation it be sent to the finance committee.

Rep. Donald D. Canfield, R., Wood, moved to send the bill to the education committee. Rep. George Grusenmeyer, D., Montgomery, moved to table Canfield's motion but Grusenmeyer's motion was defeated and the bill was referred to the school body.

Friends of the bill felt it had an even chance of receiving favorable action by the finance committee.

Opponents of "parochial" legislation said the same strategy would be resorted to "if necessary" when two other school-aid bills, passed by the senate yesterday, reach the house.

These were the Kan-Gallagher bill, passed 24 to 8, providing free textbooks of "non-sectarian" nature to students in private and parochial schools as well as public schools, and the McIntyre bill, approved 21-9, providing free transportation to parochial and private school pupils in districts where public school students are transported without cost.

Estimates Not Available

State department of education officials said no estimate could be made of the amount these bills, if approved, would cost the state, but pointed out that students in barber colleges, schools of cosmotology and many other privately-operated institutions would be eligible to benefits under the bills' provisions.

Many house members, who regard any such legislation as political "hot potatoes," privately expressed relief that the bills were taken off their hands.

At the same time the house, by a viva voce vote, recommitted to the education committee, a bill introduced by Rep. R. J. Kiefer, R., Logan, authorizing boards of education to purchase liability and property damage or accident insurance covering school buses and pupils transported in the buses. The bill is not of a parochial nature.

Absent from the air for more than eight months, Lily Pons is coming back.

The great French singer returns to the air, with Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra, on April 14 at 9 p. m., for the premiere of a new weekly program.

The association of Miss Pons and Kostelanetz is one of long standing, and for a year or more rumors have had them married, about to be married, or at the very least, engaged. During Miss Pons' absence from the air one of her activities was the making of a motion picture, "That Girl From Paris" and for thirteen week-ends Kostelanetz flew to Hollywood to conduct the music for the picture, flying back again just as regularly for the two programs weekly he was conducting in the East.

In Hollywood, Kostelanetz appeared as guest conductor with the Los Angeles Symphony orchestra with Miss Pons as guest soloist. The concert broke all attendance records for the Hollywood Bowl.

One of the songs from "That Girl From Paris" will be sung by Miss Pons for her premiere. The song is "Seal It With a Kiss," remarkable for the fact that several records were established with it.

The song was written in New York by Arthur Schwartz. It was finished on one Friday morning and played for Kostelanetz, who liked it. A telephone call was put through to the Coast, and an arranger heard the melody played in New York. Kostelanetz outlined his ideas about the arrangement. The same night, Kostelanetz flew to Hollywood. On arrival Saturday afternoon he found the arrangement complete, rehearsed it and had it on the sound track in less than two hours' time.

CORN IMPORTS TO REACH NEW HIGH BY JULY

Federal Economists Claim Total Will Exceed 50 Million Bushels

SEVEN MONTHS FIGURED

Importers Gain Fine Profit With Price Soaring

WASHINGTON, April 14 — (UP)—Imports of foreign corn in the fiscal year ending June 30 will exceed 50,000,000 bushels for an all-time record, Department of Agriculture economists estimated today.

During the first seven months of this year 31,218,520 bushels of corn were imported and most of it shipped to American farmers for fattening livestock. Importers reaped a rich harvest due to high American prices.

Official Department of Agriculture figures showed foreign corn is pouring into this country in unprecedented quantities from Argentina, Canada, Mexico, Yugoslavia and the Dominican Republic. The average is slightly more than 4,250,000 bushels a month.

Protests in Congress

Some Middle West members of Congress have protested that the restrictive policies of the AAA threaten to jeopardize this country's dominant position as an agricultural export nation. Department of Agricultural officials, however, blame the drouths for shortages of domestic corn.

The Department of Agriculture Crop Reporting Board estimated that if planting intentions are carried out, and abandonment is average, about 95,000,000 acres of corn will be harvested this year. This is a slight increase over last year's figure, due to the drouth, but is 8 per cent smaller than the 1928-32 average.

During the first four months of this marketing year, beginning Oct. 1, imports of 24,225,000 bushels of corn were sufficient to cause "small adjustment in domestic prices," federal economists said.

About 75 per cent of imported corn comes from Argentina. The total during the first seven months of the current fiscal year was 25,494,432 bushels. Canada sent 4,623,835 bushels; Dominican Republic, 314,470; Mexico, 174,913; Yugoslavia, 116,632, and all others 194,238.

Larger Imports Due

With prospects favorable for an above average 1936-37 Argentine crop, imports may be expected to be large during the next few months. The volume of corn coming into this country has increased "quite rapidly" since termination of the coastal labor strikes, officials said.

Importers have reaped a rich harvest on Argentine corn sold in this country. While No. 3 yellow corn has been selling at around $1.15 a bushel in Chicago, economist said, in Buenos Aires yellow La Plata corn sold at about 55 cents, a margin of 60 cents a bushel.

A bushel of Argentine corn delivered in Chicago costs an Argentine exporter approximately 70 cents, giving a net profit of 45 cents on every bushel imported. For the full year it is estimated importers will make a profit of approximately $20,000,000.

1,513 Lost On Titanic 25 Years Ago; Sea Safety Far Advanced Since 1912

NEW YORK, April 14 (UP)—Shortly before midnight on the night of April 14, 1912, the S. S. Titanic was plowing through the North Atlantic 800 miles off Cape Race, Newfoundland. A light shock was felt by many of the 2,224 passengers and crew aboard. The largest ship in the world had struck an iceberg.

At 2:20 A. M. on the morning of the 15th, just 2 hours and 40 minutes after the crash, the pride of the White Star Line plunged into a long, slanting dive, never to be seen again. The greatest sea disaster had occurred, taking a toll of 1,513 lives.

The "Unsinkable Titanic" had sailed from Southampton, England, on April 10, on her maiden voyage to New York. A sister ship of the S. S. Olympic, the Titanic was the last word in ships. The super liner was 882 feet long, of 66,000 tons displacement and was capable of carrying 2,500 passengers and a crew of 860.

New Type Construction

The mighty floating mansion had required three years to build. Designed by the late Lord Pirie, the Titanic was supposed to be the world's first truly unsinkable ship. She was divided into 15 heavy steel, water-tight compartments from the bottom to the top of the hull. Doors to these bulkheads could be closed automatically or by hand.

If any part of the vessel should be damaged and that section flooded, the compartments could be closed and the remaining water-tight compartments theoretically would keep the ship afloat. But this theory was exploded when the Titanic's starboard side was sheared by the submerged arm of a giant berg. Nine of the 15 compartments were flooded and the remaining 6 were insufficient to keep the vessel afloat.

"Have struck iceberg — badly damaged—rush help," the Titanic's radio flashed at 11:40 P. M., just 25 years ago today.

J. G. Phillips, wireless operator was at the key. He sent out the "CQD" distress call. He informed the Atlantic seaboard and ships in the area that the Titanic was listing as water poured into a 300-foot gash in the liner's side.

Ships Heard Call

The Cape Race wireless station heard the distress call, as did the S. S. La Provence, the S. S. Mount Temple and the S. S. Carpathia.

The first vessel to answer was the Carpathia, 58 miles away, eastward bound on a world cruise. She turned about and steamed at full speed for the Titanic. But at 2:20 A. M., the Titanic foundered, and the Carpathia did not reach the scene of the wreck until 5:30 A. M. The Titanic carried 20 lifeboats and a few rafts. Two of the lifeboats were wrecked in launching. Thus, when the Carpathia reached the scene, only 705 survivors were found of which 210 were members of the crew. Several died later of exposure.

It was this pitiful group that the Carpathia took aboard. The survivors had suffered from exposure in the open boats. They were hysterical, grief stricken and suffering from shock. Families had been separated by the rule of the sea, "women and children first." Fathers and husbands stood aside on the water-washed Titanic decks while thew saw their children and wives lowered in lifeboats. John Jacob Astor was one of these men. Other famous men who went down with the Titanic were Isidor Straus, Benjamin Guggenheim, George D. Widener and Major Archibald Butts, military aide to President Taft.

News of Disaster Late

While this great tragedy was occurring the world had only fragmentary news. On April 15 newspapers had few vital facts concerning the disaster. It was not until April 16, more than 24 hours after the Titanic sank that the first detailed news was available. At that time the passenger list was printed, but no accurate information could be obtained as to the identity of most of the survivors. It has been said that the White Star Line offices did not have official information of the disaster until after 6 P. M. April 15, more than 12 hours after the Carpathia had taken the survivors aboard.

The rescue ship arrived at New York on the night of April 18. It was not until the ship docked and the Carpathia passengers and survivors of the Titanic came ashore that the full story of the disaster was told.

There was the story of Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus. The code of the sea, "women and children first", would have separated them, but having lived their lives together, they chose to die together. Mrs. Straus refused to enter a lifeboat.

Ice Warnings Ignored

The senate committee found that ice warnings had been ignored by the Titanic officers; that the liner was under-equipped as to lifesaving apparatus and that the crew was not trained adequately in launching and handling lifeboats.

Sea-faring men are unanimous today in believing that another catastrophe like the sinking of the Titanic will never occur. The U. S. Coast Guard has developed a thorough system of ice patrol, warning all ships of danger zones. Coast Guard cutters in the late winter and early spring patrol the North Atlantic steamship lanes, locate bergs, blast them apart or follow them, sending out advice to all ships as to the bergs' positions.

Passenger liners of today also have greatly improved lifesaving equipment. All carry sufficient lifeboats and crews are drilled thoroughly in launching them. These boats now are launched by motor driven winches on almost all the bigger ships. This system is designed to eliminate perils of upsetting boats before they are lowered to the water with their cargo of human lives.

Many of the lifeboats now are power driven and some have small wireless sets. All passenger ships must have wireless operators on duty at all hours, too, a precaution designed to speed rescue of ships in distress.

AT THE CLIFTONA

One of the most charming memories of Miriam Hopkins' recent six months in Europe is the little country place she bought for herself and her small adopted son, Michael, to live in while she was working on "Men Are Not Gods," at the new Alexander Korda studios at Denham.

"It was a very lovely place", recalls Miriam, "and lovelier for its being only ten minutes' walk from the studio. It was a grand feeling —walking out of the studio after a day of hard work and finding oneself in the country after a short and pleasant walk. It would be a swell innovation for Hollywood."

"Men Are Not Gods" currently playing at the Cliftona Theatre with Gertrude Lawrence, Sebastian Shaw, a handsome newcomer to the screen, Rex Harrison and A. E. Matthews prominent in the supporting cast.

CHICK CHATS

A man and his wife were hotly discussing the merits of a very popular book. Finally the wife said to her husband, "No John, you can't appreciate it. You never wrote a book."

"No", retorted John, "and I never laid an egg, but I'm better judge of an omelet than any hen in New York!"

By the same token I believe that a flock owner is really a better judge of flock livability—yes, and chick livability—than all the breeders and hatcherymen in 17 counties! Vigor is not proven under "ideal conditions", but rather normal farm conditions and in all kind of laying houses, insulated or not, some heated, some cold, dry floors and damp, and in all kinds of weather.

Five Factors Listed

There is now a distinct trend toward better baby chicks and flock livability and this is found in five factors, three of which are "not so hot", while the fourth and fifth are very favorable. These factors are.

1. Transportation.
2. Crowding.
3. High-pressure production.
4. Breeding from rugged stock.
5. Improved care and feeding.

1. Modern transportation of chicks, poultry and eggs—by train, plane and truck—sometimes across the continent—does spread infection. This factor has been with the poultry industry less than 40 years. Marketing chicks and poultry products is no longer local. California eggs are marketed in New York. Indiana hatching eggs may be sent to New Jersey. Ohio poultry is stored in Chicago, shipped in refrigerator cars and perhaps retailed in Cleveland markets. Baby chicks are shipped from Texas to New York or vice versa. 3. Heavy production drains vitality. It takes body size and vigor to stand up and produce even 180 eggs a year. High-pressure production works livability, and the breeder always faces the problem of balancing egg yield with hen vigor.

4. By what is termed "family" testing so that chicks come only from "families" that prove their ability to live long and happily under heavy production, the flock mortality has been reduced and a method known as "Progeny" testing of individuals also enables the hatcherymen to use eggs only from birds that transmit livability. That is highly important since both livability and layability is inherited.

5. The fifth factor rests entirely on the flock owner who, by proper care and feeding, encourages high chick and pullet livability. Those who keep accurate records know that a dead hen represents the loss of her meat value and also her potential production. CORN IMPORTS TO REACH NEW HIGH BY JULY

Federal Economists Claim Total Will Exceed 50 Million Bushels

SEVEN MONTHS FIGURED

Importers Gain Fine Profit With Price Soaring

WASHINGTON, April 14 — (UP)—Imports of foreign corn in the fiscal year ending June 30 will exceed 50,000,000 bushels for an all-time record, Department of Agriculture economists estimated today.

During the first seven months of this year 31,218,520 bushels of corn were imported and most of it shipped to American farmers for fattening livestock. Importers reaped a rich harvest due to high American prices.

Official Department of Agriculture figures showed foreign corn is pouring into this country in unprecedented quantities from Argentina, Canada, Mexico, Yugoslavia and the Dominican Republic. The average is slightly more than 4,250,000 bushels a month.

Protests in Congress

Some Middle West members of Congress have protested that the restrictive policies of the AAA threaten to jeopardize this country's dominant position as an agricultural export nation. Department of Agricultural officials, however, blame the drouths for shortages of domestic corn.

The Department of Agriculture Crop Reporting Board estimated that if planting intentions are carried out, and abandonment is average, about 95,000,000 acres of corn will be harvested this year. This is a slight increase over last year's figure, due to the drouth, but is 8 per cent smaller than the 1928-32 average.

During the first four months of this marketing year, beginning Oct. 1, imports of 24,225,000 bushels of corn were sufficient to cause "small adjustment in domestic prices," federal economists said.

About 75 per cent of imported corn comes from Argentina. The total during the first seven months of the current fiscal year was 25,494,432 bushels. Canada sent 4,623,835 bushels; Dominican Republic, 314,470; Mexico, 174,913; Yugoslavia, 116,632, and all others 194,238.

Larger Imports Due

With prospects favorable for an above average 1936-37 Argentine crop, imports may be expected to be large during the next few months. The volume of corn coming into this country has increased "quite rapidly" since termination of the coastal labor strikes, officials said.

Importers have reaped a rich harvest on Argentine corn sold in this country. While No. 3 yellow corn has been selling at around $1.15 a bushel in Chicago, economist said, in Buenos Aires yellow La Plata corn sold at about 55 cents, a margin of 60 cents a bushel.

A bushel of Argentine corn delivered in Chicago costs an Argentine exporter approximately 70 cents, giving a net profit of 45 cents on every bushel imported. For the full year it is estimated importers will make a profit of approximately $20,000,000.

1,513 Lost On Titanic 25 Years Ago; Sea Safety Far Advanced Since 1912

NEW YORK, April 14 (UP)—Shortly before midnight on the night of April 14, 1912, the S. S. Titanic was plowing through the North Atlantic 800 miles off Cape Race, Newfoundland. A light shock was felt by many of the 2,224 passengers and crew aboard. The largest ship in the world had struck an iceberg.

At 2:20 A. M. on the morning of the 15th, just 2 hours and 40 minutes after the crash, the pride of the White Star Line plunged into a long, slanting dive, never to be seen again. The greatest sea disaster had occurred, taking a toll of 1,513 lives.

The "Unsinkable Titanic" had sailed from Southampton, England, on April 10, on her maiden voyage to New York. A sister ship of the S. S. Olympic, the Titanic was the last word in ships. The super liner was 882 feet long, of 66,000 tons displacement and was capable of carrying 2,500 passengers and a crew of 860.

New Type Construction

The mighty floating mansion had required three years to build. Designed by the late Lord Pirie, the Titanic was supposed to be the world's first truly unsinkable ship. She was divided into 15 heavy steel, water-tight compartments from the bottom to the top of the hull. Doors to these bulkheads could be closed automatically or by hand.

If any part of the vessel should be damaged and that section flooded, the compartments could be closed and the remaining water-tight compartments theoretically would keep the ship afloat. But this theory was exploded when the Titanic's starboard side was sheared by the submerged arm of a giant berg. Nine of the 15 compartments were flooded and the remaining 6 were insufficient to keep the vessel afloat.

"Have struck iceberg — badly damaged—rush help," the Titanic's radio flashed at 11:40 P. M., just 25 years ago today.

J. G. Phillips, wireless operator was at the key. He sent out the "CQD" distress call. He informed the Atlantic seaboard and ships in the area that the Titanic was listing as water poured into a 300-foot gash in the liner's side.

Ships Heard Call

The Cape Race wireless station heard the distress call, as did the S. S. La Provence, the S. S. Mount Temple and the S. S. Carpathia.

The first vessel to answer was the Carpathia, 58 miles away, eastward bound on a world cruise. She turned about and steamed at full speed for the Titanic. But at 2:20 A. M., the Titanic foundered, and the Carpathia did not reach the scene of the wreck until 5:30 A. M. The Titanic carried 20 lifeboats and a few rafts. Two of the lifeboats were wrecked in launching. Thus, when the Carpathia reached the scene, only 705 survivors were found of which 210 were members of the crew. Several died later of exposure.

It was this pitiful group that the Carpathia took aboard. The survivors had suffered from exposure in the open boats. They were hysterical, grief stricken and suffering from shock. Families had been separated by the rule of the sea, "women and children first." Fathers and husbands stood aside on the water-washed Titanic decks while thew saw their children and wives lowered in lifeboats. John Jacob Astor was one of these men. Other famous men who went down with the Titanic were Isidor Straus, Benjamin Guggenheim, George D. Widener and Major Archibald Butts, military aide to President Taft.

News of Disaster Late

While this great tragedy was occurring the world had only fragmentary news. On April 15 newspapers had few vital facts concerning the disaster. It was not until April 16, more than 24 hours after the Titanic sank that the first detailed news was available. At that time the passenger list was printed, but no accurate information could be obtained as to the identity of most of the survivors. It has been said that the White Star Line offices did not have official information of the disaster until after 6 P. M. April 15, more than 12 hours after the Carpathia had taken the survivors aboard.

The rescue ship arrived at New York on the night of April 18. It was not until the ship docked and the Carpathia passengers and survivors of the Titanic came ashore that the full story of the disaster was told.

There was the story of Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus. The code of the sea, "women and children first", would have separated them, but having lived their lives together, they chose to die together. Mrs. Straus refused to enter a lifeboat.

Ice Warnings Ignored

The senate committee found that ice warnings had been ignored by the Titanic officers; that the liner was under-equipped as to lifesaving apparatus and that the crew was not trained adequately in launching and handling lifeboats.

Sea-faring men are unanimous today in believing that another catastrophe like the sinking of the Titanic will never occur. The U. S. Coast Guard has developed a thorough system of ice patrol, warning all ships of danger zones. Coast Guard cutters in the late winter and early spring patrol the North Atlantic steamship lanes, locate bergs, blast them apart or follow them, sending out advice to all ships as to the bergs' positions.

Passenger liners of today also have greatly improved lifesaving equipment. All carry sufficient lifeboats and crews are drilled thoroughly in launching them. These boats now are launched by motor driven winches on almost all the bigger ships. This system is designed to eliminate perils of upsetting boats before they are lowered to the water with their cargo of human lives.

Many of the lifeboats now are power driven and some have small wireless sets. All passenger ships must have wireless operators on duty at all hours, too, a precaution designed to speed rescue of ships in distress.

AT THE CLIFTONA

One of the most charming memories of Miriam Hopkins' recent six months in Europe is the little country place she bought for herself and her small adopted son, Michael, to live in while she was working on "Men Are Not Gods," at the new Alexander Korda studios at Denham.

"It was a very lovely place", recalls Miriam, "and lovelier for its being only ten minutes' walk from the studio. It was a grand feeling —walking out of the studio after a day of hard work and finding oneself in the country after a short and pleasant walk. It would be a swell innovation for Hollywood."

"Men Are Not Gods" currently playing at the Cliftona Theatre with Gertrude Lawrence, Sebastian Shaw, a handsome newcomer to the screen, Rex Harrison and A. E. Matthews prominent in the supporting cast.

AT THE GRAND

Rochelle Hudson and Michael Whalen are co-featured in "Woman-Wise," Twentieth Century-Fox picture exposing the crooked prizefight racketeers, opening Wednesday at the Grand Theatre. Whalen, assisted by Miss Hudson as a newspaper woman, is a crusading sports editor who combats the unscrupulous promoters mulcting the public.

AT THE CIRCLE

Barbara Stanwyck plays her first comedy role in "Red Salute," the rollicking Reliance comedy now showing at the Circle Theatre.

As Drue Van Allen, a madcap college girl, she meets a series of thrilling and amusing adventures when she is stranded across the Mexican border with a young buck private, played by Robert Young.

Barbara is said to give the best performance of her career in this Edward Small production, presented by Harry M. Goetz.

CHICK CHATS

A man and his wife were hotly discussing the merits of a very popular book. Finally the wife said to her husband, "No John, you can't appreciate it. You never wrote a book."

"No", retorted John, "and I never laid an egg, but I'm better judge of an omelet than any hen in New York!"

By the same token I believe that a flock owner is really a better judge of flock livability—yes, and chick livability—than all the breeders and hatcherymen in 17 counties! Vigor is not proven under "ideal conditions", but rather normal farm conditions and in all kind of laying houses, insulated or not, some heated, some cold, dry floors and damp, and in all kinds of weather.

Five Factors Listed

There is now a distinct trend toward better baby chicks and flock livability and this is found in five factors, three of which are "not so hot", while the fourth and fifth are very favorable. These factors are.

1. Transportation.
2. Crowding.
3. High-pressure production.
4. Breeding from rugged stock.
5. Improved care and feeding.

1. Modern transportation of chicks, poultry and eggs—by train, plane and truck—sometimes across the continent—does spread infection. This factor has been with the poultry industry less than 40 years. Marketing chicks and poultry products is no longer local. California eggs are marketed in New York. Indiana hatching eggs may be sent to New Jersey. Ohio poultry is stored in Chicago, shipped in refrigerator cars and perhaps retailed in Cleveland markets. Baby chicks are shipped from Texas to New York or vice versa. Poultry is "stepping out", and in this stepping it picks up many bad bugs!

2. Crowding is responsible for heavy losses of chicks. Not more than three chicks to each square of breeder house space, is a good rule to follow, which means that you'll limit the chicks in a 10 by 12 house to 350 to avoid crowding. Leghorns require three square feet of floor space and heavies four square feet to avoid dangerous crowding.

3. Heavy production drains vitality. It takes body size and vigor to stand up and produce even 180 eggs a year. High-pressure production works livability, and the breeder always faces the problem of balancing egg yield with hen vigor.

4. By what is termed "family" testing so that chicks come only from "families" that prove their ability to live long and happily under heavy production, the flock mortality has been reduced and a method known as "Progeny" testing of individuals also enables the hatcherymen to use eggs only from birds that transmit livability. That is highly important since both livability and layability is inherited.

5. The fifth factor rests entirely on the flock owner who, by proper care and feeding, encourages high chick and pullet livability. Those who keep accurate records know that a dead hen represents the loss of her meat value and also her potential production. Keeping birds alive, well and productive is one way to increase poultry income.—By S. CROMAN.

THE MEDICINE CABINET

ALTHOUGH the purpose of the home medicine cabinet is the protection of health and life, it frequently becomes a source of illness and even death.

The handling of poisons seems to have ample safeguards thrown around it everywhere except in the home. Utmost care is used by the manufacturer who makes it, the physician who prescribes it and the druggists who dispenses it. But as soon as it reaches the home, the safeguards seem to break down. The box or bottle is placed in the medicine cabinet along with a conglomeration of other boxes, bottles and whatnots.

Along may come a child whose attention is attracted to the mysterious collection, and before the mother or father is aware of it a poisonous tablet may have been swallowed. Even adults are not immune to the serious possibilities of the medicine cabinet. Reaching for a harmless remedy in the dark, or with attention diverted elsewhere, may bring fatal results to the man or woman doing the reaching. Many such cases are on record.

The danger is a real one. It is so real that the United States public health service has taken recognition of it in a warning in which it declares that the average person "messes up everything from common baking soda to bichloride of mercury tablets, despite the fact that doctors have issued warnings about this danger of having poisons in the home."

If poisons must be kept in the home, the proper way, of course, is to seggregate them and to see that they are out of the reach of exploring children. Equal care should be taken to see that they are so placed that there will be no danger of a person mistaking them for a harmless remedy.

SPENDERS

THE exceptions prove the rule that people like to spend money. So early in life does the desire assert itself that it is thought by some to be instinctive. There is less odium attached to the name "spendthrift" than to its opposite "miser," which might be cited as evidence of the universality of the buying-habit.

This tendency among the masses to spend and buy is recognized by those who have something to sell. Before some may spend there must be others with something to sell and the times when the demand has exceeded the supply have been infrequent and of brief duration.

There are many degrees of buying or spending. Some people spend more than their income. Some buy for the love of "shopping" and others because they need the things they purchase. There are the heavy spenders as well as the thrifty spenders. Every members of civilized society must spend and buy in greater or less degree.

But there are only two types of sellers. There is that type which strives to give the buyer his "money's worth," and there is the second type which sees in the spending propensity an opportunity to get the other fellow's money for nothing.

It is unfortunate that the public does not do all its spending with those who give them "honest weight" for their dollars. If it did there would be no need for laws against using the mails to defraud, wildcat stock, bogus promotions and confidence men.

WHAT OF NEW YORK-PARIS RACE?

WASHINGTON — It is still an official secret, but the widely touted New York-to-Paris air race scheduled for this summer is off.

The spectacular contest was conceived by the French Government to commemorate the tenth anniversary of Colonel Charles Lindbergh's flight to Paris. Large money prizes were offered and a number of countries announced their intention to enter their fastest planes and ace pilots.

What now upsets the race are the plans of the big airlines to start a regular trans-Atlantic commercial service this summer. They feared that accidents in the stunt race might have an adverse effect on their business.

Assistant Commerce Secretary "Sailboat" Johnson went to bat strongly for the airlines and put pressure on the French. The State Department and the French Foreign Office are now deliberating the form the public announcement will take explaining abandonment of the race.

KEY MAN

Justice Owen J. Roberts holds the key to what the Supreme Court will do on the Social Security Act.

If the Philadelphian lines up for the law, it will be upheld. If he goes against it, the law is out.

There is no magic in this forecast. The alignment in the Court was clearly revealed last week during the three days of the argument on the issue.

The question put to opposing lawyers by Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo showed definitely that they favored the measure. Conversely, the queries propounded by Justices Butler, McReynolds and Sutherland indicated pronounced disapproval.

Justice Van Devanter was absent nursing a cold. However, he unfailingly votes with the conservative group, and is practically certain to do so on the social security issue. This divides the Court four to four, with Roberts holding the deciding ballot.

What he will do on the momentous test is known only to himself. Of the eight Justices who heard the arguments he was the only one who asked no questions and made no comments. Throughout the proceedings he maintained an inscrutable silence.

THIS FIRST

Charles Stuckey, of a London law firm, reluctantly has agreed to a scheme to defraud the daughter of one of his few respectable clients, Jacqueline Smith, of an inheritance of $1,500,000 from an American uncle. In keeping with the plan, Col. Alex Lutman—who has a hold over Stuckey—Jim Asson, an ex-convict, and the lawyer are stopping at the same hotel in Cobeasil with Mrs. Smith and her daughter. In dire financial straits, Mrs. Smith has persuaded Jacqueline to marry Asson, posing as a wealthy Englishman, unsuspectedly falling in with the plan of the three men to have Asson cultivate the girl, have all of her property assigned to him before their marriage, then splitting up the inheritance before she learns of it. Lutman, as Jim's "trustee", has hurried Jacqueline's decision by revealing a check he cashed for her mother returned marked "insufficient funds". After meeting Jacqueline, Stuckey is more reluctant than ever to go through with the scheme and stalls by telling them all the property deed must be signed in London. Back in London Charles leaves Lutman in his office while he goes after Jim Asson. Mrs. Smith and Jacqueline arrive at Stuckey's office to sign the deed. Jacqueline insists on a conference alone with Charles before signing the deed. Jacqueline signs the deed but later Charles tells Lutman she signed in the wrong place and that he will have to prepare another, perhaps delaying the wedding. Finding Charles opposing the marriage, Lutman suggests that Charles himself marry her instead of Jim, but he refuses. Meanwhile Elsie Harringay, Stuckey's stenographer, proposes a private chat with Jacqueline. The typist declares Jim Asson is her man and that she will not let Jacqueline marry him, telling her he has just finished a prison sentence. Her head in a whirl, Jacqueline goes home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

"Colonel Lutman assured me that everything would be all right"

CHAPTER 24

JACQUELINE scribbled a note as soon as she reached home. She was going out, it said, and might be home late, and her mother was not to wait up for her. She smiled as she propped the note against a vase on the mantelpiece. That, at any rate, would reduce the odds against her in the coming conflict. She could tackle her mother tonight when she would not have Jim and Colonel Lutman to support her.

Jacqueline spent the afternoon at a movie, had a meal in a small Soho restaurant, and in the evening sat through two rounds of the program in another movie. When she had walked from the theater district to the flat it was almost half-past 11.

Her mother had already gone to bed, and Jacqueline, glad of the respite, decided that she would break the news in the morning, and was tiptoeing across the landing toward her bedroom when she heard her mother's voice.

"Is that you, Jacqueline?"

She opened the door of her mother's room and switched on the light.

"So late, dear," said Mrs. Smith. "I had to come to bed, but I couldn't sleep. I'm much too anxious to sleep. Colonel Lutman assured me that everything would be all right—we had an excellent lunch, Jacqueline. It was such a relief not to have to look at the price of everything before saying I'd have it—but you behaved very strangely at Mr. Stuckey's office this morning, and just for the moment I was afraid you were going to refuse to sign. You did sign the deed, dear, didn't you?"

"Oh, yes, mother, I signed it."

A smile spread over her mother's face and her hand found Jacqueline's and drew her down until her lips brushed the girl's cheek.

"You've made me very happy, Jacqueline," she said. "Bless you, dear. It's years since I really slept properly, but I shall tonight."

Jacqueline hesitated, frowning; then she suddenly stooped, kissed her mother, and switched out the light.

It was all very well to talk, she told herself as she went to her bedroom, but it wasn't always easy not to be soft. Poor mother! She should at least have her good night's rest tonight.

Charles had work to do on that afternoon of his talk alone with Jacqueline. There was an important consultation the next day, and a mass of details to be mastered before he could go to bed that night; but when Miss Harringay and Mr. Bells left at 6 o'clock, the work was still untouched, and he was still sitting at his desk, staring at the papers in front of him. He looked, as Miss Harringay had remarked to Mr. Bells, "as if he had something stuck in his gizzard and couldn't cough it up."

At 7 o'clock he gave up, went out, and had a meal in a neighboring restaurant. Then, returning to his office, he settled himself at his desk and made a serious effort to bring his thoughts to heel and concentrate on the matter in hand. For two hours he struggled on, and then, glancing at his watch and finding that it was 10 o'clock, he leaned back in his chair and stared resentfully at the documents he had been studying. It was no use trying to understand them tonight; he would get up early and have a go at them in the morning.

There was a small room above the offices of Messrs. Stuckey & Stuckey which, though it bore no outward and visible sign of their occupation, was none the less included in the suite. It was approached by a short spiral staircase in the corner of the main office, and had been used, until Charles became sole partner of the firm, as a store room. Charles, however, had found a better use for it. There were numbered amongst Messrs. Stuckey & Stuckey's clients gentlemen whom prudence warned to shun publicity and daylight, and who, consequently, when in need of legal advice, preferred that their consultations with their legal advisers should be held at an hour when they could slip in and out of the office under cover of darkness. Charles had had appointments at 2 o'clock in the morning, and midnight was quite a common hour; and since at that time of night the journey from Rotherhithe to Bloomsbury, where the solicitor occupied a furnished flat, involved a long walk or an expensive taxi ride, he had transformed his erstwhile store room into a very fair apology for a bedroom.

There, on such nights as he was detained at the office, he slept; there, too, from time to time, he accommodated his friend, Captain Allwright, when his ship, the John o' Gaunt, was berthed nearby. And others had slept in that room, whose history would make splendid popular fiction of the most thrilling type.

Charles decided that he would sleep there tonight. He climbed the spiral staircase, kicked off his shoes, switched off the light, and flung himself on the bed in the darkness, only to discover that sleep was out of the question. That word "coward" that Jacqueline had flung at him rankled and made him restless. What did she know, or what had she guessed? Something, she had said, had happened in his life to push him down—something tremendous. Was that only feminine intuition? Was it that she had realized, when she saw him, that he wasn't in the least like the man he could be, that here in Rotherhithe, acting as mouthpiece for the riff-raff, he was out of his element, that by rights he should be doing something far better?

He smiled as he thought of the deed. It had been a brain-wave, that announcement that Jacqueline had signed in the wrong place. He would stick to it, too; it would give him a few more days, at any rate, and even so there was no time to be lost. Lutman, of course, hadn't believed him; he had hardly hoped that he would accept his word for it, but so long as Lutman did not see the deed, he would not risk letting the marriage take place, and that was what mattered. Lutman had sized up pretty accurately what had been in his mind. It had only been a vague idea then, but it was a clear-cut resolve now. Tomorrow morning he would destroy this deed, and then he would see Jacqueline and get the whole wretched business off his chest. He wondered if, when he had told her everything, she would still think him a coward.

Charles sat up, switched on the light, and felt in his pocket for his cigaret case. He put a cigaret between his lips and began exploring each pocket in turn in search of matches. Then, deciding that he must have left them on his desk, he got up from the bed, crossed to the head of the spiral staircase, and began to go down. Halfway down he suddenly paused and stood rigid, staring in the direction of the door that led from the main office into his private room.

The door was wide open—he could see the top right-hand corner of it silhouetted against the window—and in his own room, just for a fraction of a second, he had seen a flash of light. Through the window, perhaps—from some boat on the river. But he didn't think so; it had been too vivid for that. It was more as if someone had snapped a flashlight on and off again.

He waited, his gaze riveted on the doorway, but the light did not reappear, and he was about to continue his expedition in search of matches when he paused again and his grip tightened on the handrail. The door into his room was open, but he had not left it open. He distinctly remembered shutting it. The bottom edge had caught a ruck in the linoleum and he had had to force the door to. Someone was in his room.

Charles did not hesitate now. Whatever other type of coward he might be, he was not a physical coward. Slowly, treading noiselessly, he went down the staircase, congratulating himself that he had removed his shoes before lying down, straining his ears for the least sound, and all the time peering into the darkness of the doorway. Cautiously feeling his way past Miss Harringay's desk, he reached the doorway, felt for the electric light switch just inside his room, found it, and pressed it down.

DIET AND HEALTH

Extreme Obesity Always a Subject of Interest

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

EXTREME OBESITY has always excited as much interest as giantism, which we discussed yesterday. The same physician, Dr. Charles D. Humberd, of Barnard, Mo., who so scientifically recorded the measurements of the Alton giant, studied an example of extreme obesity in the case of a man of Maryville, Mo., who died about a year ago now. His greatest weight was attained in August, 1924, when he was 34 years old, at which time he weighed 570 pounds.

Dr. Clendening

This is about the same as the overweight patient treated so remarkably by my friend, Dr. Newburgh of Ann Arbor. Dr. Newburgh thought that his patient was the heaviest person who had ever been scientifically weighed.

Daniel Lambert, a famous fat man of the eighteenth century, is said to have weighed 739 pounds. Edward Bright, the fat man of Essex, weighed 616 pounds. These earlier records, however, are all subject to criticism, and the records are liable to be exaggerated as time goes on.

Incidentally, Dr. Newburgh's patient was reduced in the course of three years, on diet alone, to less than 200 pounds.

Life Not Easy

It is no easy life, that of an extremely fat man. Dr. Humberd's patient, for instance, always had to pay 40 per cent extra for his clothes on account of the extra material required. About the only things that he could buy at an ordinary store were handkerchiefs and neckties. He could not get into an ordinary bathtub. He was a good swimmer but his appearance in a pool created so much comment that he had to give up what was practically his only pleasure.

"Innumerable broken chairs and shattered beds marked his spoor as he ponderously and placidly ambled through life." He drove his own car, a low priced coach, whose driver's seat had been set back ten inches from its ordinary position.

He had an enormous appetite, and it remained consistently enormous. He indulged his craving for candies and ice cream immoderately. His vision and hearing were normal and his mind very active. He was particularly good at mathematics and at accounting.

His weight at birth is not recorded, but he was known to be plump, and his family history was negative except for a paternal grandmother who weighed 365 pounds. His health all his life was good except for minor ailments that might afflict anybody. He died at the age of 46, suddenly and accidentally. He needed only the usual seven or eight hours sleeps at night, and he was said to be friendly and fun-loving, shrewd and competent.

THE MEDICINE CABINET

ALTHOUGH the purpose of the home medicine cabinet is the protection of health and life, it frequently becomes a source of illness and even death.

The handling of poisons seems to have ample safeguards thrown around it everywhere except in the home. Utmost care is used by the manufacturer who makes it, the physician who prescribes it and the druggists who dispenses it. But as soon as it reaches the home, the safeguards seem to break down. The box or bottle is placed in the medicine cabinet along with a conglomeration of other boxes, bottles and whatnots.

Along may come a child whose attention is attracted to the mysterious collection, and before the mother or father is aware of it a poisonous tablet may have been swallowed. Even adults are not immune to the serious possibilities of the medicine cabinet. Reaching for a harmless remedy in the dark, or with attention diverted elsewhere, may bring fatal results to the man or woman doing the reaching. Many such cases are on record.

The danger is a real one. It is so real that the United States public health service has taken recognition of it in a warning in which it declares that the average person "messes up everything from common baking soda to bichloride of mercury tablets, despite the fact that doctors have issued warnings about this danger of having poisons in the home."

If poisons must be kept in the home, the proper way, of course, is to seggregate them and to see that they are out of the reach of exploring children. Equal care should be taken to see that they are so placed that there will be no danger of a person mistaking them for a harmless remedy.

SPENDERS

THE exceptions prove the rule that people like to spend money. So early in life does the desire assert itself that it is thought by some to be instinctive. There is less odium attached to the name "spendthrift" than to its opposite "miser," which might be cited as evidence of the universality of the buying-habit.

This tendency among the masses to spend and buy is recognized by those who have something to sell. Before some may spend there must be others with something to sell and the times when the demand has exceeded the supply have been infrequent and of brief duration.

There are many degrees of buying or spending. Some people spend more than their income. Some buy for the love of "shopping" and others because they need the things they purchase. There are the heavy spenders as well as the thrifty spenders. Every members of civilized society must spend and buy in greater or less degree.

But there are only two types of sellers. There is that type which strives to give the buyer his "money's worth," and there is the second type which sees in the spending propensity an opportunity to get the other fellow's money for nothing.

It is unfortunate that the public does not do all its spending with those who give them "honest weight" for their dollars. If it did there would be no need for laws against using the mails to defraud, wildcat stock, bogus promotions and confidence men.

WHAT OF NEW YORK-PARIS RACE?

WASHINGTON — It is still an official secret, but the widely touted New York-to-Paris air race scheduled for this summer is off.

The spectacular contest was conceived by the French Government to commemorate the tenth anniversary of Colonel Charles Lindbergh's flight to Paris. Large money prizes were offered and a number of countries announced their intention to enter their fastest planes and ace pilots.

What now upsets the race are the plans of the big airlines to start a regular trans-Atlantic commercial service this summer. They feared that accidents in the stunt race might have an adverse effect on their business.

Assistant Commerce Secretary "Sailboat" Johnson went to bat strongly for the airlines and put pressure on the French. The State Department and the French Foreign Office are now deliberating the form the public announcement will take explaining abandonment of the race.

KEY MAN

Justice Owen J. Roberts holds the key to what the Supreme Court will do on the Social Security Act.

If the Philadelphian lines up for the law, it will be upheld. If he goes against it, the law is out.

There is no magic in this forecast. The alignment in the Court was clearly revealed last week during the three days of the argument on the issue.

The question put to opposing lawyers by Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Brandeis, Stone and Cardozo showed definitely that they favored the measure. Conversely, the queries propounded by Justices Butler, McReynolds and Sutherland indicated pronounced disapproval.

Justice Van Devanter was absent nursing a cold. However, he unfailingly votes with the conservative group, and is practically certain to do so on the social security issue. This divides the Court four to four, with Roberts holding the deciding ballot.

What he will do on the momentous test is known only to himself. Of the eight Justices who heard the arguments he was the only one who asked no questions and made no comments. Throughout the proceedings he maintained an inscrutable silence.

"Colonel Lutman assured me that everything would be all right"

ALSO THIS FIRST

Charles Stuckey, of a London law firm, reluctantly has agreed to a scheme to defraud the daughter of one of his few respectable clients, Jacqueline Smith, of an inheritance of $1,500,000 from an American uncle. In keeping with the plan, Col. Alex Lutman —who has a hold over Stuckey—Jim Asson, an ex-convict, and the lawyer are stopping at the same hotel in Cobenzil with Mrs. Smith and her daughter. In dire financial straits, Mrs. Smith has persuaded Jacqueline to marry Asson, posing as a wealthy Englishman, unsuspectedly falling in with the plan of the three men to have Asson cultivate the girl, have all of her property assigned to him before their marriage, then splitting up the inheritance before she learns of it. Lutman, as Jim's "trustee", has hurried Jacqueline's decision by revealing a check he cashed for her mother returned marked "insufficient funds". After meeting Jacqueline, Stuckey is more reluctant than ever to go through with the scheme and stalls by telling them all the property deed must be signed in London. Back in London Charles leaves Lutman in his office while he goes after Jim Asson. Mrs. Smith and Jacqueline arrive at Stuckey's office to sign the deed. Jacqueline insists on a conference alone with Charles before signing the deed. Jacqueline signs the deed but later Charles tells Lutman she signed in the wrong place and that he will have to prepare another, perhaps delaying the wedding. Finding Charles opposing the marriage, Lutman suggests that Charles himself marry her instead of Jim, but he refuses. Meanwhile Elsie Harringay, Stuckey's stenographer, proposes a private chat with Jacqueline. The typist declares Jim Asson is her man and that she will not let Jacqueline marry him, telling her he has just finished a prison sentence. Her head in a whirl, Jacqueline goes home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 24

JACQUELINE scribbled a note as soon as she reached home. She was going out, it said, and might be home late, and her mother was not to wait up for her. She smiled as she propped the note against a vase on the mantelpiece. That, at any rate, would reduce the odds against her in the coming conflict. She could tackle her mother tonight when she would not have Jim and Colonel Lutman to support her.

Jacqueline spent the afternoon at a movie, had a meal in a small Soho restaurant, and in the evening sat through two rounds of the program in another movie. When she had walked from the theater district to the flat it was almost half-past 11.

Her mother had already gone to bed, and Jacqueline, glad of the respite, decided that she would break the news in the morning, and was tiptoeing across the landing toward her bedroom when she heard her mother's voice.

"Is that you, Jacqueline?"

She opened the door of her mother's room and switched on the light.

"So late, dear," said Mrs. Smith. "I had to come to bed, but I couldn't sleep. I'm much too anxious to sleep! Colonel Lutman assured me that everything would be all right—we had an excellent lunch, Jacqueline. It was such a relief not to have to look at the price of everything before saying I'd have it—but you behaved very strangely at Mr. Stuckey's office this morning, and just for the moment I was afraid you were going to refuse to sign. You did sign the deed, dear, didn't you?"

"Oh, yes, mother, I signed it."

A smile spread over her mother's face and her hand found Jacqueline's and drew her down until her lips brushed the girl's cheek.

"You've made me very happy, Jacqueline," she said. "Bless you, dear. It's years since I really slept properly, but I shall tonight."

Jacqueline hesitated, frowning; then she suddenly stooped, kissed her mother, and switched out the light.

It was all very well to talk, she told herself as she went to her bedroom, but it wasn't always easy not to be soft. Poor mother! She should at least have her good night's rest tonight.

Charles had work to do on that afternoon of his talk alone with Jacqueline. There was an important consultation the next day, and a mass of details to be mastered before he could go to bed that night; but when Miss Harringay and Mr. Bells left at 6 o'clock, the work was still untouched, and he was still sitting at his desk, staring at the papers in front of him. He looked, as Miss Harringay had remarked to Mr. Bells, "as if he had something stuck in his gizzard and couldn't cough it up."

At 7 o'clock he gave up, went out, and had a meal in a neighboring restaurant. Then, returning to his office, he settled himself at his desk and made a serious effort to bring his thoughts to heel and concentrate on the matter in hand. For two hours he struggled on, and then, glancing at his watch and finding that it was 10 o'clock, he leaned back in his chair and stared resentfully at the documents he had been studying. It was no use trying to understand them tonight; he would get up early and have a go at them in the morning.

There was a small room above the offices of Messrs. Stuckey & Stuckey which, though it bore no outward and visible sign of their occupation, was none the less included in the suite. It was approached by a short spiral staircase in the corner of the main office, and had been used, until Charles became sole partner of the firm, as a store room. Charles, however, had found a better use for it. There were numbered amongst Messrs. Stuckey & Stuckey's clients gentlemen whom prudence warned to shun publicity and daylight, and who, consequently, when in need of legal advice, preferred that their consultations with their legal advisers should be held at an hour when they could slip in and out of the office under cover of darkness. Chatted with Ed Wallace, the master baker, who was showing some worry over the rapidly mounting prices of bread-making material, but could not keep the mind entirely on the subject, it darting off at a tangent and mulling with the skyrocketing costs of newspaper-making material. There goes Casey Marion with his arm in a sling because he attempted to explore an unlighted basement. Met Red Dowden, brother of Durward the banker, and learned that some farmers have been forced to halt plowing because of too dry soil. Noted a display of white shoes at Charlie Mack's.

Wonder how many folk remember Dan Pittman, the negro who preached here many years ago? And about the time Frank X. Lynch filled his water pitcher with gin? Dan paused in his preaching and reached for the water glass. A sip, and a look of surprise and pleasure passed over his face, for Dan liked his gin. He drank the entire contents of a full glass and then really got down to preaching. "Oh Lawd," he said, "Come down and save these nigger sinners. Come down right now, Lawd. Come right through the roof, Lawd. Never mind the shingles, I'll pay for what you bust."

Saw the name of Lawrence Ebert on the wall at the Wittich building where remodeling is in progress, the name in pencil as clear and bright as though written this very day. And Lawrence gone these many years, but remembered as the little tailor with a wide reputation as a penmen who wrote with a lot of flourishes, including pictures of birds. None of them left these days.

Congratulated Carl Hunter on redecoration of his store front and then with regret forced to refuse a fishing invitation extended by Guy Pettit, the fly rod wielder. Home then for dinner and a session with the Saturday Evepost in which did find some interesting comment on affairs of the day. Then to bed, completely ignoring the icebox on the way, for this day the scales had pointed to two pounds overweight which an unkind spectator at the weighing had declared pointed to old age, and dreading old age, his vow to remove the indications at once.

ROUGH RIDING?

The guide was conducting a tourist party through the automobile plant. He stopped by the assembly line.

"Do you know what would happen if that man on the right side ever missed a day at work?" he asked the members of the party.

"No, what would happen?" spoke up one.

"Twenty-two hundred and sixty-one cars would go out of the factory without springs?"

"Say mister," said an interested onlooker, "that fellow's been off a lot, hasn't he?"

RAW ROOKS

LEE THOMAS GRISSOM is an example of Manager Charley Dressen's confidence in a young hurling staff. Dressen, who pilots the Reds, had one of the youngest pitching staffs in the majors last year and now plans to insert a few more recruits, among them Mr. Grissom.

And Lee looks like the real stuff, despite a rather black year in 1936 when illness wrecked his show. Lee began the season with the Reds in '36, and, after participating in a few games, was struck by ill health. He did manage to hurl a few for Nashville in the Southern association later, winning four and losing one.

But his training camp showing this season has made him the talk of the Reds. A powerful southpaw delivery gives Lee an excellent chance to become one of the Reds' starting pitchers.

Before coming to the Reds at the end of the 1935 season, Lee pitched good ball in the Texas league, tossing in 13 wins for Fort Worth in 1935. The big fellow had been purchased from Beckley, W. Va., where he began his pro career.

Lee is 25 years old, was born in Sherman, Tex., makes his home in California, stands six feet two and is quite a dancer.

Feller's Name Magic Among Big Leaguers

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK, April 14.—(UP)—Baseball's new magic name is Bob Feller!

He has stolen the spotlight from Dizzy Dean and Joe DiMaggio. This 18-year-old schoolboy from an Iowa farm, who was raised by his dad to become a big league pitcher, has been more widely-publicized and has more box office appeal than any freshman player in baseball annals. He's the Shirley Temple of the diamond—the story-book ball player who has the turnstiles humming.

On the threshold o his first full season with the Cleveland Indians, young Feller is more of a sensation than was Babe Ruth during the Bambino's first six years in the majors. Feller stepped from obscurity to fame in seven-league boots. The great Ruth was with the Red Sox six years before the Yanks bought him and ballyhooed his home-run hitting into baseball's biggest attraction.

Huge Crowds Drawn

Already Feller is rivaling Ruth's box office records on his first exhibition tour through the provinces. Three times Feller has been advertised as the starting pitcher, and three times the playing field has been jammed. On April 4 he pitched three innings against the Giants at New Orleans and drew 13,000. Four days later he worked three innings against the Giants at Fort Smith, Ark., and 5,900 turned out.

Then on April 11 against Little Rock he packed in 5,600.

In the three times Feller has been advertised to pitch the Indians have drawn 24,500 customers. Fans yell:

"I drove 150 miles to see you, Bob. Don't fail me, strike him out."

"Come on, Feller, we're all pulling for you."

His youth, his modesty and his natural ability without cockiness have made him popular. He never kicks at an umpire's decision. He just gets out there and pitches.

The kid's personality is best described by this incident. He was misquoted in last Sunady's papers as follows: "Every game I go in I expect to win." He was almost broken-hearted when a newspaper man showed that "bragging statement" to him.

"Please correct that," Feller pleaded. "What I said was: 'I'll try and win every game I pitch.'"

There's not a bit of Dizzy Dean's "pop-off" attitude in Feller. He's willing to let his deeds on the mound speak for him.

Ball players are doing Feller's talking for him. Mel Ott, Giants' home run king, said: "Feller has more stuff on his fast one than any one I've ever seen."

"He's the greatest kid pitcher I ever saw," Bill Terry said. "He's faster than Walter Johnson was when I batted against him, but, of course, that was when Johnson was slipping."

Wally Schang, Cleveland soach who caught Walter Johnson, Smokey Joe Wood and Bullet Joe Bush, three of baseball's fastest pitchers, said: "Feller has more speed than Wood or Bush as much as Johnson."

HARDER CHOSEN TO START RACE FOR CLEVELAND

THOMASTON, Ga., April 14 — (UP) — Mel Harder, ace of the Cleveland mound staff, today had clinched the honor of pitching the opening contest next Tuesday against the Detroit Tigers.

Harder won the berth by his performance against the New York Giants yesterday at Rome, Ga., although he dropped a 5 to 1 decision to the National league champions.

Harder worked the full nine innings and is the first Indian pitcher to go the route this spring.

The Indians and Giants were to continue the series here today. Bob Feller, the rookie phenomenon, was scheduled to hurl the entire contest for Cleveland.

Hadrer gave up nine hits yesterday, but kept them well scattered. With perfect support the New Yorkers would have scored only once.

The brightest part of Harder's performance to Manager Steve O'Neill was that he forsook the side-arm style he has tried to employ this spring and went back to the over-hand pitch that made him one of the American league's kingpin hurlers in 1934 and 1935.

Hal Schumacher was in the box for the Giants, and gave the Indians only six hits.

Cleveland's only run off him came in the ninth on Hal Trosky's double and a single by Bruce Campbell.

YOUNG PITCHER SHOWS ABILITY FOR OHIO STATE

COLUMBUS, April 14 — (UP) —Mark Kilmer, husky sophomore hurler from Brookville, today had turned in the best pitching performance of any Ohio State moundsman this season.

Kilmer gave up on two hits here yesterday as the Bucks defeated Denison 6 to 3.

The youngster set 13 of the Denison batters down on strikes.

Marrow, in the box for Denison, had the best of his mound duel with Kilmer for five innings, but weakened in the late innings and Ohio scored all its runs in the last three rounds.

BOSTON FIELDER HURT WHEN HIT BY MOORE PITCH

DURHAM, N. C., April 14 — (UP) — The Boston Red Sox and Cincinnati Reds played their final exhibition of the year in Rocky Mount today, leaving Boston Outfielder Mel Almada in Duke hospital with a dented skull.

X-rays disclosed no fracture from the ball pitched by Lloyd Moore in yesterday's game which the Sox won, 6-1.

How Much Do You Know?

1—Who is the chief of staff of umpires in the American league?

2—How many games did the Yanks win last season?

3—When did Lou Gehrig last win the A. L. batting crown?

The Answers

1—Tommy Connolly.
2—102 games.
3—In 1934.

Washington, D. C., has more telephones in proportion to its population than any other city in the world.

About This And That In Many Sports

League Teams Needed

George Hammel, president of the softball league, has been having difficulty in finding backers for teams in the loop this year—A meeting is scheduled in Hammel's office Friday evening, at which time the fate of the organization will probably be known — Four teams are ready to join, but two others are needed before the competition can start * * *

Cavaretta to Garden

We read where Phil Cavaretta, kid first baseman, will play center field for the Chicago Cubs this year, at least at the start of the season — Cavaretta's place on the initial sack has been taken by Jimmy "Ripper" Collins and it is likely that the clouter will keep it—There are better fielders than the Ripper, but there are few who tote a more dangerous stick—Apparently Charlie Grimm has decided Joe Marty, young coast star, is not ready—Demaree and Galan will likely be in the other spots * * *

All Positions Changed

Columbus Red Birds will trot a team on the field against Indianapolis in the A. A. opener that will be altered in every position when compared with last year's crew—It will include Chervinko c, Heusser p, Prout 1b, Stein 2b, (Jordan is out with injuries), Webb ss, Davis 3b, Rizzo lf, King cf, Slaughter rf — Last year's team, which finished the season behind the 8-ball, was comprised of Owen c, Klinger p, Weintraub 1b, Cuccinello 2b, Delker ss, Gutteridge 3b, Winsett lf, Fullis cf, Cullop rf — Of last year's team Owen, Weintraub, Gutteridge and Winsett are in the big show—The former is expected to divide the Cardinal catching duties with Brusie Ogrodowski, also a former Red Birdl

Replacements Needed

It would seem the Columbus entry needs a lot of replacements, and they had better start coming pretty soon * * *

RAW ROOKS

LEE THOMAS GRISSOM is an example of Manager Charley Dressen's confidence in a young hurling staff. Dressen, who pilots the Reds, had one of the youngest pitching staffs in the majors last year and now plans to insert a few more recruits, among them Mr. Grissom.

And Lee looks like the real stuff, despite a rather black year in 1936 when illness wrecked his show. Lee began the season with the Reds in '36, and, after participating in a few games, was struck by ill health. He did manage to hurl a few for Nashville in the Southern association later, winning four and losing one.

But his training camp showing this season has made him the talk of the Reds. A powerful southpaw delivery gives Lee an excellent chance to become one of the Reds' starting pitchers.

Before coming to the Reds at the end of the 1935 season, Lee pitched good ball in the Texas league, tossing in 13 wins for Fort Worth in 1935. The big fellow had been purchased from Beckley, W. Va., where he began his pro career.

Lee is 25 years old, was born in Sherman, Tex., makes his home in California, stands six feet two and is quite a dancer.

Feller's Name Magic Among Big Leaguers

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK, April 14.—(UP)—Baseball's new magic name is Bob Feller!

He has stolen the spotlight from Dizzy Dean and Joe DiMaggio. This 18-year-old schoolboy from an Iowa farm, who was raised by his dad to become a big league pitcher, has been more widely-publicized and has more box office appeal than any freshman player in baseball annals. He's the Shirley Temple of the diamond—the story-book ball player who has the turnstiles humming.

On the threshold o his first full season with the Cleveland Indians, young Feller is more of a sensation than was Babe Ruth during the Bambino's first six years in the majors. Feller stepped from obscurity to fame in seven-league boots. The great Ruth was with the Red Sox six years before the Yanks bought him and ballyhooed his home-run hitting into baseball's biggest attraction.

Huge Crowds Drawn

Already Feller is rivaling Ruth's box office records on his first exhibition tour through the provinces. Three times Feller has been advertised as the starting pitcher, and three times the playing field has been jammed. On April 4 he pitched three innings against the Giants at New Orleans and drew 13,000. Four days later he worked three innings against the Giants at Fort Smith, Ark., and 5,900 turned out.

Then on April 11 against Little Rock he packed in 5,600.

In the three times Feller has been advertised to pitch the Indians have drawn 24,500 customers. Fans yell:

"I drove 150 miles to see you, Bob. Don't fail me, strike him out."

"Come on, Feller, we're all pulling for you."

His youth, his modesty and his natural ability without cockiness have made him popular. He never kicks at an umpire's decision. He just gets out there and pitches.

The kid's personality is best described by this incident. He was misquoted in last Sunady's papers as follows: "Every game I go in I expect to win." He was almost broken-hearted when a newspaper man showed that "bragging statement" to him.

"Please correct that," Feller pleaded. "What I said was: 'I'll try and win every game I pitch.'"

There's not a bit of Dizzy Dean's "pop-off" attitude in Feller. He's willing to let his deeds on the mound speak for him.

Ball players are doing Feller's talking for him. Mel Ott, Giants' home run king, said: "Feller has more stuff on his fast one than any one I've ever seen."

"He's the greatest kid pitcher I ever saw," Bill Terry said. "He's faster than Walter Johnson was when I batted against him, but, of course, that was when Johnson was slipping."

Wally Schang, Cleveland soach who caught Walter Johnson, Smokey Joe Wood and Bullet Joe Bush, three of baseball's fastest pitchers, said: "Feller has more speed than Wood or Bush as much as Johnson."

HARDER CHOSEN TO START RACE FOR CLEVELAND

THOMASTON, Ga., April 14 — (UP) — Mel Harder, ace of the Cleveland mound staff, today had clinched the honor of pitching the opening contest next Tuesday against the Detroit Tigers.

Harder won the berth by his performance against the New York Giants yesterday at Rome, Ga., although he dropped a 5 to 1 decision to the National league champions.

Harder worked the full nine innings and is the first Indian pitcher to go the route this spring.

The Indians and Giants were to continue the series here today. Bob Feller, the rookie phenomenon, was scheduled to hurl the entire contest for Cleveland.

Hadrer gave up nine hits yesterday, but kept them well scattered. With perfect support the New Yorkers would have scored only once.

The brightest part of Harder's performance to Manager Steve O'Neill was that he forsook the side-arm style he has tried to employ this spring and went back to the over-hand pitch that made him one of the American league's kingpin hurlers in 1934 and 1935.

Hal Schumacher was in the box for the Giants, and gave the Indians only six hits.

Cleveland's only run off him came in the ninth on Hal Trosky's double and a single by Bruce Campbell.

YOUNG PITCHER SHOWS ABILITY FOR OHIO STATE

COLUMBUS, April 14 — (UP) —Mark Kilmer, husky sophomore hurler from Brookville, today had turned in the best pitching performance of any Ohio State moundsman this season.

Kilmer gave up on two hits here yesterday as the Bucks defeated Denison 6 to 3.

The youngster set 13 of the Denison batters down on strikes.

Marrow, in the box for Denison, had the best of his mound duel with Kilmer for five innings, but weakened in the late innings and Ohio scored all its runs in the last three rounds.

BOSTON FIELDER HURT WHEN HIT BY MOORE PITCH

DURHAM, N. C., April 14 — (UP) — The Boston Red Sox and Cincinnati Reds played their final exhibition of the year in Rocky Mount today, leaving Boston Outfielder Mel Almada in Duke hospital with a dented skull.

X-rays disclosed no fracture from the ball pitched by Lloyd Moore in yesterday's game which the Sox won, 6-1.

About This And That
In Many Sports

League Teams Needed

George Hammel, president of the softball league, has been having difficulty in finding backers for teams in the loop this year—A meeting is scheduled in Hammel's office Friday evening, at which time the fate of the organization will probably be known — Four teams are ready to join, but two others are needed before the competition can start * * *

Cavaretta to Garden

We read where Phil Cavaretta, kid first baseman, will play center field for the Chicago Cubs this year, at least at the start of the season — Cavaretta's place on the initial sack has been taken by Jimmy "Ripper" Collins and it is likely that the clouter will keep it—There are better fielders than the Ripper, but there are few who tote a more dangerous stick—Apparently Charlie Grimm has decided Joe Marty, young coast star, is not ready—Demaree and Galan will likely be in the other spots * * *

All Positions Changed

Columbus Red Birds will trot a team on the field against Indianapolis in the A. A. opener that will be altered in every position when compared with last year's crew—It will include Chervinko c, Heusser p, Prout 1b, Stein 2b, (Jordan is out with injuries), Webb ss, Davis 3b, Rizzo lf, King cf, Slaughter rf — Last year's team, which finished the season behind the 8-ball, was comprised of Owen c, Klinger p, Weintraub 1b, Cuccinello 2b, Delker ss, Gutteridge 3b, Winsett lf, Fullis cf, Cullop rf — Of last year's team Owen, Weintraub, Gutteridge and Winsett are in the big show—The former is expected to divide the Cardinal catching duties with Brusie Ogrodowski, also a former Red Birdl

Replacements Needed

It would seem the Columbus entry needs a lot of replacements, and they had better start coming pretty soon * * *

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

CONTRACT BRIDGE

MANY A GROSSLY overbid contract gets made because the declarer keeps his eyes open, reading the cards of every suit, trying every finesse which seems logical and perhaps winding up by building either a lead-throwing end play or a squeeze. To the great player, an apparently impossible contract is not the cause of his giving up hope, but an inspiration to go to work.

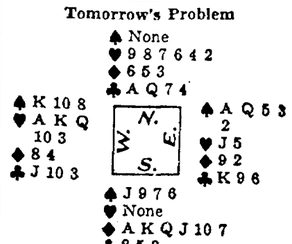

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

Lee Hazen, one of New York's most thorough card readers, found himself in a 6-No Trump contract on the South cards of this deal because of some overoptimistic bidding by North. When the diamond 5 was led, he saw possible losing tricks in every suit, but went manfully to work.

Winning the first diamond trick, he led his spade J, West covering and the A taking. Two more diamond tricks showed that this suit would not break. There remained one hope, that West had four hearts to the K or J, so a squeeze could be built.

Launching this play, he led a club to the Q and brought back a heart to his 10, losing to the J. West fired back a spade, won by the Q and followed by the 10. The heart 5 to the A dropped the K, and the club A was laid down. The club K put the pinchers on West. If he discarded a heart, both of those in the dummy would be good. He took the equally bad alternative of trashing his spade 9, whereupon Mr. Hazen completed one of the lowliest of squeezes by discarding the heart 6 and taking the last two tricks with the heart Q and the spade 5.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

MANY A GROSSLY overbid contract gets made because the declarer keeps his eyes open, reading the cards of every suit, trying every finesse which seems logical and perhaps winding up by building either a lead-throwing end play or a squeeze. To the great player, an apparently impossible contract is not the cause of his giving up hope, but an inspiration to go to work.

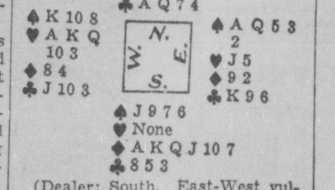

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

Lee Hazen, one of New York's most thorough card readers, found himself in a 6-No Trump contract on the South cards of this deal because of some overoptimistic bidding by North. When the diamond 5 was led, he saw possible losing tricks in every suit, but went manfully to work.

Winning the first diamond trick, he led his spade J, West covering and the A taking. Two more diamond tricks showed that this suit would not break. There remained one hope, that West had four hearts to the K or J, so a squeeze could be built.

Launching this play, he led a club to the Q and brought back a heart to his 10, losing to the J. West fired back a spade, won by the Q and followed by the 10. ILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY'S PRESIDENT TO TALK AT A. M. E. CONFERENCE

R DELEGATES TO BE SELECTED FOR CONVENTION

Dr. Walker on Schedule For Address Wednesday at Session's Close

'NUMBERS RACKET' HIT

Many Ministers Speak Before 100 Pastors, Lay Members

An address by Dr. D. Ormonde Walker, president of Wilberforce university, and election of delegates to the annual conference highlight the Wednesday sessions of the Springfield district of the African Methodist church being held in Circleville. Dr. Walker's talk will close the conference.

Dr. Walker is recognized as one of the leading educators of his race.

Nearly 100 pastors and lay delegates are attending the conference.

Tuesday evening's session was addressed by several Circleville men, including Mayor W. J. Graham, Frank Fischer, Fred C. Clark, and the Rev. H. A. Sayre.

Other highlights of the Tuesday session were talks by many of the church's leading men.

Many Pastors Speak

The keynote of the sessions was stressed in sermons preached by Dr. J. H. Maxwell, presiding elder of the Cincinnati district, and Dr. J. W. Arnold, of the Columbus district.

Dr. Maxwell urged that all persons realize that resurrected life, which gave hope of immortality, was an immortality of quality rather than of duration. Dr. Arnold urged that the minister have faith in his message, and declare the whole truth, to a world in need of faith, if it would be saved from chaos.

The spirituality of people was discussed by the Rev. J. D. White. He said in part "While the church is composed of human beings, yet it is a spiritual organization."

He said the meaning of the term 'spiritual' is "god-like; that which is mental, intellectual; that which is divine, pure and holy."

"The church," he said, "should make the supreme endeavor to retain that spiritual inheritance in which it was born. There are many evidences of a spiritual church, but first, its members must be born again. If they are born again, it naturally follows that the church will believe in Holy Scriptures as a rule and guide to Holy living, and will strive to attain to that state of life."

Much of Tuesday afternoon's session was taken up with a discussion of important problems confronting the district.

"Numbers Racket" Hit

The Rev. H. E. Lewis led the discussion of "The Moral Condition of the People of the District", in which he severely condemned the "numbers racket".

Dr. P. S. Hill, pastor of Allen chapel, Dayton, discussed "The Financial Ability of the People". He declared that "the depression did in no way decrease the spending of our money on luxuries, so it should not have slackened devotion for the support of the church. If the members of the district's churches suffered because of their financial loyalty, the church would have been unfair to expect it, but since the depression did not cause them to spend less on fun, the church has a right to expect support."

The Rev. W. T. Watson, in dealing with the question of missions, said "If people were truly sensitive to the needs of the home and foreign fields, they would make sacrifices, if need be to further the cause of the missions."

The Rev. Mary Lou Henderson, pastor of the A. M. E. church, is acting as hostess for the conference, while members of her church are assisting.

VOTE TO RAISE MANY MILLIONS PUT ON SLATE

000,000 for 1937 "might be found" in the general appropriations bill which comes before the senate finance committee today. Another $2,000,000 would be cut from the appropriations bill as the state's share of relief in 1938, with the remainder -- $6,000,000 —coming from sales tax revenues as provided by law.

Sub-divisions, under Nichols' proposal, would be required to put up $5,000,000 this year and $9,000,000 in 1938 as their share of the relief burden.

Sen. Lawrence said the only alternate proposal was offered by Sen. Bernard J. McCluskey, D., Cuyahoga, who suggested passing the Nichols bill without any specified appropriation except an estimated $750,000 unused flood relief appropriation to be used to tide the counties over until it could be determined how much money, if any could be slashed from the budget bill.

Last Four Weeks

McCluskey estimated the $750,000 would last about four weeks, providing the counties matched this amount.

Lawrence said if the Nichols bill is defeated the senate probably will go into another caucus to decide what action to take. He said the new development put the legislature back in the same position it was in three months ago when the relief problem first arose.

The question of new taxes to finance the relief load, as proposed by the governor in his message Monday, was not discussed in the caucus, Lawrence said. He said he believed, however, the 15 senators who voted against the Nichols bill represented the bloc favoring imposition of new levies.

The fate of the Huml income tax bill when it reaches the upper house, revenues from which would be used indirectly for relief, was doubtful, with most observers predicting its defeat.

The bill provides a tax on incomes graduated from three to nine per cent. Half the revenues would be retained by the counties in which they were collected, and the remainder would be retained by the state. Sixty per cent of this would be allocated to the public school fund, thus releasing funds now earmarked for schools for relief purposes, and 40 per cent would go to the local government fund after deduction of administrative costs.

Incomes up to $3,000 a year would be taxed three per cent, with a one per cent tax on each additional $1,000 bracket, reaching a maximum of nine per cent on incomes in excess of $8,000.

Exemptions include $1,600 for the head of a family with wife only and $200 for each dependent under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support and $800 for single persons.

All single persons with net incomes over $800 and all heads of families with incomes exceeding $1,600 would be required to submit returns.

State and other public employes now exempt from federal income taxes would be required to make returns plus the amount they would pay in federal taxes if not exempted.

The house two years ago passed the Ward income tax bill but the senate finance committee refused to act on the measure.

average rate, at the end of the fiscal year they would have spent close to the amounts estimated in the January budget.

For example, the legislative establishment's spending has been at the rate of approximately $1,900,000 monthly. If this average were maintained for the remainder of the fiscal year, this department would have expended approximately $22,800,000, approximately $800,000 below that estimated in the budget.

The executive department's average monthly expenditures have been $45,248. At this rate, the fiscal year's expenditures would exceed the budget estimates by approximately $30,000.

The state department's monthly average spending so far is $1,435,683, or at a rate of $17,300,000 for the fiscal year, practically the amount estimated in the budget.

WILBERFORCE UNIVERSITY'S PRESIDENT TO TALK AT A. M. E. CONFERENCE

Sub-divisions, under Nichols' proposal, would be required to put up $5,000,000 this year and $9,000,000 in 1938 as their share of the relief burden.

Sen. Lawrence said the only alternate proposal was offered by Sen. Bernard J. McCluskey, D., Cuyahoga, who suggested passing the Nichols bill without any specified appropriation except an estimated $750,000 unused flood relief appropriation to be used to tide the counties over until it could be determined how much money, if any could be slashed from the budget bill.

Last Four Weeks

McCluskey estimated the $750,000 would last about four weeks, providing the counties matched this amount.

Lawrence said if the Nichols bill is defeated the senate probably will go into another caucus to decide what action to take. He said the new development put the legislature back in the same position it was in three months ago when the relief problem first arose.

The question of new taxes to finance the relief load, as proposed by the governor in his message Monday, was not discussed in the caucus, Lawrence said. He said he believed, however, the 15 senators who voted against the Nichols bill represented the bloc favoring imposition of new levies.

The fate of the Huml income tax bill when it reaches the upper house, revenues from which would be used indirectly for relief, was doubtful, with most observers predicting its defeat.

The bill provides a tax on incomes graduated from three to nine per cent. Half the revenues would be retained by the counties in which they were collected, and the remainder would be retained by the state. Sixty per cent of this would be allocated to the public school fund, thus releasing funds now earmarked for schools for relief purposes, and 40 per cent would go to the local government fund after deduction of administrative costs.

Incomes up to $3,000 a year would be taxed three per cent, with a one per cent tax on each additional $1,000 bracket, reaching a maximum of nine per cent on incomes in excess of $8,000.

Exemptions include $1,600 for the head of a family with wife only and $200 for each dependent under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support and $800 for single persons.

All single persons with net incomes over $800 and all heads of families with incomes exceeding $1,600 would be required to submit returns.

State and other public employes now exempt from federal income taxes would be required to make returns plus the amount they would pay in federal taxes if not exempted.

The house two years ago passed the Ward income tax bill but the senate finance committee refused to act on the measure.

average rate, at the end of the fiscal year they would have spent close to the amounts estimated in the January budget.

For example, the legislative establishment's spending has been at the rate of approximately $1,900,000 monthly. If this average were maintained for the remainder of the fiscal year, this department would have expended approximately $22,800,000, approximately $800,000 below that estimated in the budget.

The executive department's average monthly expenditures have been $45,248. At this rate, the fiscal year's expenditures would exceed the budget estimates by approximately $30,000.

The state department's monthly average spending so far is $1,435,683, or at a rate of $17,300,000 for the fiscal year, practically the amount estimated in the budget.
